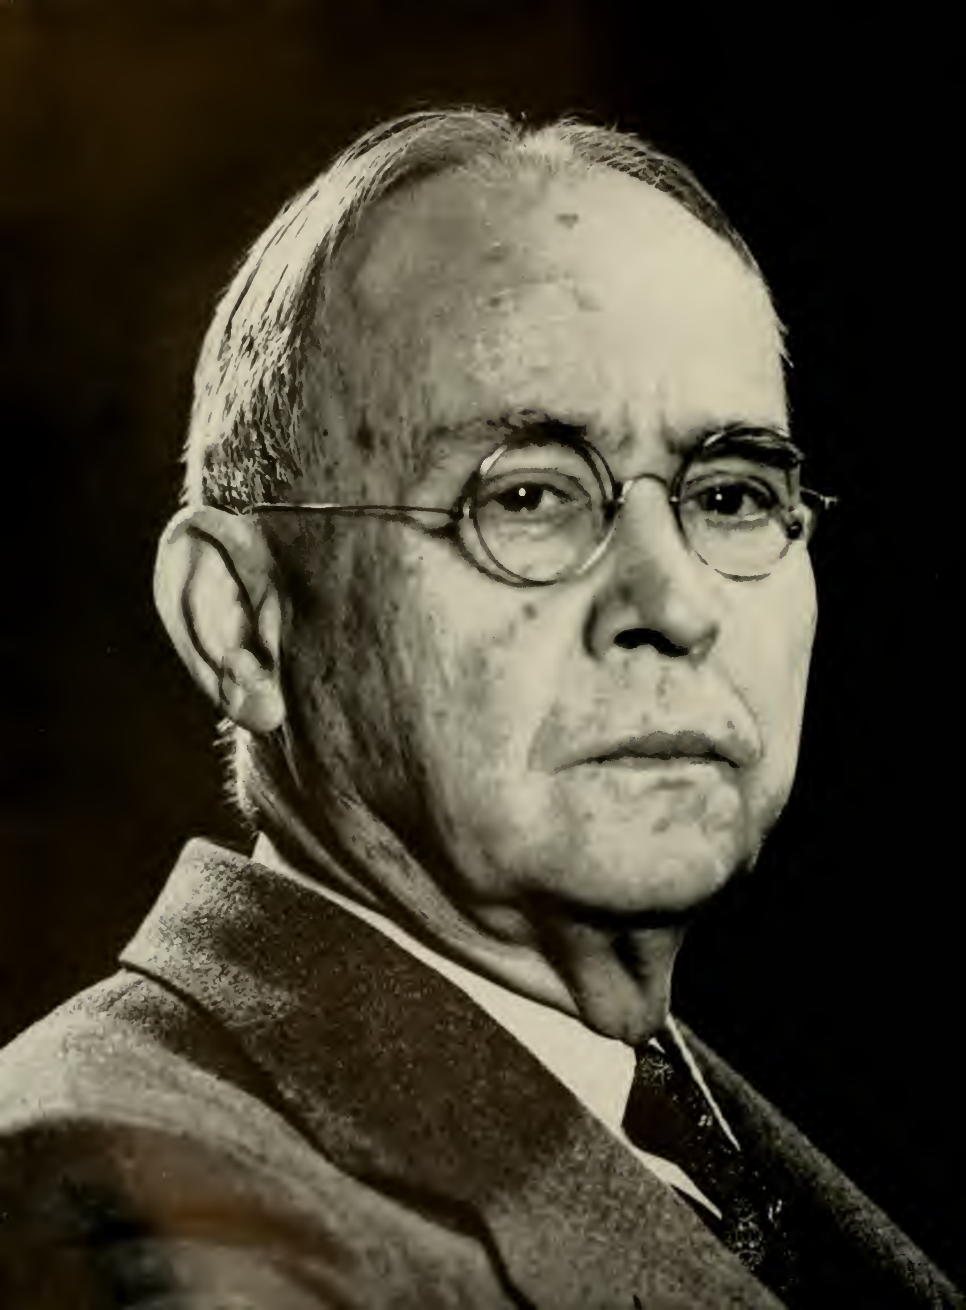
PROUDLY DEDICATES THIS BOOK TO...



Sometimes a thoroughly dedicated and able man dwells in the community of a university, touching and inspiring the lives of all with whom he comes in contact. Such a man is not soon equalled and will be long remembered by those who knew him. Dr. William Hane Wannamaker, who died August 2nd, 1958, was this sort of man.

Dr. Wannamaker gave himself and his talents wholeheartedly to Duke University. He was one of the trio of Few, Flowers, and Wannamaker who guided the growth and development of Trinity College into the great educational institution which is Duke University today. A large part of that development was due to the efforts of Dr. Wannamaker.

Possessing the marks of a great scholar, Dr. Wannamaker nevertheless early in his career displayed the qualities of a true leader and able administrator. Realizing the great need, he answered the call for capable administrators and accepted an appointment as Dean of Trinity College in 1917. With characteristic enthusiasm he threw himself to the task of expanding the academic program of Duke. One of his notable successes was his part in the work of assembling an outstanding faculty at the growing university.

Dr. Wannamaker was deeply interested in the athletic program at Duke as a means of conveying to young people a sense of true values, good sportsmanship, and school spirit. Faculty chairman of the Athletic Council, he was highly influential in pointing athletics down the road of the highest traditions and ideals.

Dr. Wannamaker also had a deep concern for the student as an individual. As the University went through a period of rapid growth, he made a great effort to retain the system of personal contacts with students that is present in the small college.

His genuine interest in the students was particularly evident to those who were members of his classes. Time and time again he was described by his former students as "an inspiring teacher . . . sympathetic . . . loyal . . . fair . . . considerate . . . a real friend." Often he spurred students on to new horizons of learning beyond his own field of German language and literature.

Those who never knew Dr. Wannamaker will remember him for his outstanding work as an educator and for his outstanding contribution to the substantial growth of Duke University. Those who did know him well will remember him with affection and respect for his personality and ideals. For these reasons—his service and his personality—the 1959 CHANTICLEER is dedicated to Dr. William Hane Wannamaker.

ADMINISTRATION EDITOR:

Carol Corder

THE administration of Duke University is many things. It is a varied body composed of many units—yet it is a single unit; it is an impersonal body functioning for the good of the students—yet it is a personal contact for the students; it works for the student during undergraduate years—yet it remains a contact for those students who graduate; it is a body which is taken for granted—yet it is loudly criticised if something displeases the students or parents; it is not static, but has long-range plans to make Duke University bigger and better.

To begin with, the Administration is a varied community—comparable to any town in the United States. President Edens is the mayor of that town, Dukiana, and it is his duty to over-see the entire organization; while the Board of Trustees is the City Council of Dukiana, an advisory body. Administrative Heads are the "Heads" of the numerous Governmental Departments necessary for the co-ordinated functioning of the town. The College of Engineering and Women's College are two suburban town-ships which have separate governments, yet are dependent on the larger town; and the Deans, Directors, and Heads of these two Colleges, as town-ship leaders, work in co-operation with metropolitan Dukiana.

Furthermore, the Department Heads of Duke University are the leading business and professional men of Dukiana, who are joined together in a type of Chamber of Commerce where each represents his own company or profession, yet each is responsible for the smooth running of his own "business." In every community there are several large institutions, hospitals, law courts, special schools, libraries, parks, and perhaps a small college or two—these are the Graduate and Professional Schools of Duke University.

The James B. Duke Professors are the principals and superintendents of Dukiana's school system—vital to the education of the community; while faculty members are the instructors. Within this community, too, is a Guidance Bureau where men and women in the community may seek help with their problems—the House Counselors on East Campus, who are the personal contacts of the students. The Alumni Department of Duke is the contact for students after graduation, and provides another unique feature of Dukiana by keeping track of each person who leaves the community upon graduation. Thus, Dukiana is a varied community with all parts working together making it a co-ordinated center in the state, Universities—which encompasses all the students.

The above analogy is but a means of showing how each part of the Administration has its job to do; yet it is a co-ordinated center which works to keep the University united and running smoothly. Each part has a direct importance to student life and each does more than the students realize, for the Administration takes care of accepted things and represents the student body of Duke University in Durham, in North Carolina, and around the world.

president of duke university

Some thirty-five years ago, the principal of a Tennessee mountain school wrote a letter to an Emory University official on behalf of one of his students:

"This is our first commencement," the letter said. "In our first class of five there is one boy, the pride of our school. He is a tall fellow, with a brilliant mind, and a very pleasing personality. He wishes to go to college. He will not be able to put out in the money line, for his father is a typical mountain man, serving three or four churches along with his farming. They are splendid people, however, and the boy is bound to make his mark soon. All I want is a chance for him.

"He is happy to work anywhere . . . I feel sure that he could help in office work, mow lawns, fire furnaces—in fact, he is not afraid of hard work."

The student was Arthur Hollis Edens. Today, with a long career of scholastic excellence and of distinguished service in the field of education behind him, he still "is not afraid of hard work."

Ten years have passed since Dr. Edens assumed the Presidency of Duke University. Those years have witnessed tremendous strides in every area of University life—buildings to the value of $18,000,000 have been completed or are now under construction; the total of employees in all capacities has risen 23.5 per cent within the past four years alone; the student body has become an increasingly able one; and annual grants for research projects have grown from $70,000 to $3,500,000.

However, to dwell on the past accomplishments of an individual or of a university is to turn one's back on the future. Dr. Edens recognized this when he stated that, on the occasion of his first Founder's Day at Duke, he had tried "to grasp fully the concept that 'a university is never a completed creation,' that 'to consider any stage in its development as final is to deny it the contributions and the vigor which each generation brings.' "

This philosophy has guided Pesidential and University policy for the past decade, and in 1958-1959, a year of re-examination and of search for new directions, it has become the center of a slowly unfolding concept for the future. All facets of a university—student, faculty, and administrative—contribute to its development, but it is the "man at the top" whose strength of leadership determines along which ideological path the university will progress. With the appointment this year of a Long Range Planning Committee and with the designation of certain long range goals—the raising of the quality rather than the quantity of the student body, provision for increased scholarly research, and the concept of the student as his own teacher—President Edens has proved himself a man of imagination and foresight. He has indeed "made his mark."

Chairman of the Board of Trustees, Norman A. Cocke

The Board of Trustees—policy-makers for the University—is a thirty-six member body elected by conferences of the North Carolina Methodist Church and by the Alumni Association. Each trustee holds his position for six years.

In addition to foreseeing and fulfilling the general needs of the University, the duties of the Board include control of the Duke endowment fund; legislation of rules, regulations, and by-laws; confirmation of faculty appointments; election of the President of the University; issuance of diplomas; and conferring of marks of honor.

The Board of Trustees, as a whole, meets only twice a year, in February and June. In the interim between these meetings, the powers of the Board are exercised by an Executive Committee; this group consists of seven members, two of whom—the President of the University and the Chairman of the Board of Trustees—are ex-officio. The committee is elected by the Board and meets generally once a month.

Norman Cocke completed his fifth year of service as Chairman of the Board this February.

The year?—1958-59. The setting?—Allen Building, West Campus. The people?—Administrators.

To the students of Duke University, 1958-59 meant one year more subtracted from the date of graduation. To the men in Allen Building, it meant something quite different—another rung in the ladder, another step along the way in raising Duke to the foremost ranks of American universities.

Any move upward is a difficult one. Disagreement is inevitable, but farsighted planning and strong leadership must be exerted by someone. And, as the continuing core of the University, the Administration must necessarily be that someone. As one Duke professor remarked this year, "Long-range planning is a license to dream," and 1958-59 was milestoned by much of this sort of administrative dreaming, underlain by concrete plans. The stiffening of admission requirements, the addition of new schools within the University, and even the suggestion of a Duke University abroad were among those dreams for the future envisioned by the Administration in planning sessions during the course of the year.

Who are these Administrators? Portraits mean little; long lists of accomplishments are soon forgotten; but personalities leave a lasting imprint. So in these pages of the CHANTICLEER we present the Administrators through a glance at that part of the University upon which they have placed the marks of their personalities.

Within the ranks of the Administration, 1958-59 was a year of change. William Wannamaker, vice-chancellor of the University and one of its ablest leaders during the transition from Trinity College to Duke University, died on August 2, 1958. He was one of the great planners.

Several new faces make their appearance in this section this year. Among them is Marcus Hobbs, new Dean of the University. Dean Hobbs obtained all three of his degrees from Duke and returned to his Alma Mater as an instructor in the Chemistry Department in 1935. Since that time he has held the position of Department Chairman (1951-54) and, most recently, Dean of the Graduate School of Arts and Sciences.

Another new face is that of Charles E. Ward, Dean of Undergraduate Studies. Dr. Ward is also a former Duke student, and having served as Chairman of the English Department prior to his new appointment, is no stranger to administrative duties within the University.

John M. Dozier has for a number of years been familiar to students as Executive Secretary of the Scholarship Committee. In addition to his present office of Secretary, Mr. Dozier acts as Assistant Business Manager of the University—a versatile record of service.

(I request) "that great care and discrimination be exercised in admitting as students only those whose previous records show a character, determination, and application evincing a wholesome and real ambition for life." Such were the wishes of the University's founder. In order that these standards might be met, the administrative machinery of Trinity College, the heart of the University, was set up.

Today those wishes of James B. Duke are still the goals of the men in Allen Building. E. B. Weatherspoon, as Director of Admissions for both Trinity College and the College of Engineering, each year initiates the creation of a new class of undergraduate men possessed of the required qualities of character, determination, and application. This year the Class of 1962, composed of 708 entering freshman men, was one of the largest which Duke University has had since World War II. Evidence of the ability of this group was indicated from their college board tests and placement tests results and from the fact that they were picked from the largest number of applicants in the history of the University.

Geographically, they were a representative class: 52% came from the southeastern states, 30% from the Northeast, 4% from New England, 27% from the Southwest, 2.5% from the Far West, and 1.5% from foreign countries. Translating these statistics into different terms and including the freshman women, a survey showed that the Class of 1962 represented 41 states, nine foreign countries, two U. S. territorial possessions (Hawaii and Puerto Rico), and the District of Columbia.

Of those 708 freshmen who entered Trinity College last fall, estimates show that 450, or approximately sixty per cent, will emerge as Duke graduates in June of 1962. To a great extent, the success of that sixty per cent in threading the obstacles of four years of college life rests with the men who will direct their progress—the deans of Trinity College. The record of each attests to his varied ability and experience. Alan Manchester, Dean of the College, has held that position for two years. In addition to his administrative duties in this area, he also serves as assistant to the Vice President in the Division of Education and as Professor of History on the University faculty. Robert Cox's position as Dean of Men brings him into daily contact with students of both Trinity College and the College of Engineering. From a student point of view, perhaps Dean Cox's most important function is that of overseeing the social life of these Colleges.

The three assistant deans of Trinity College all combine busy administrative schedules with teaching duties. Charles B. Johnson and Barney Jones, both Duke graduates themselves, hold positions as Associate Professor of Education and Assistant Professor of Religion respectively. Howard Strobel is an Associate Professor in the Chemistry Department.

college of engineering

1958-1959 was an eventful year for the College of Engineering. Accepting the challenge of modern developments in science and technology, the College contributed to this field of knowledge with research projects of its own. A contract with the Atomic Energy Commission (held jointly with the Physics Department) provided for an advanced study of the conductivity of metals with a minimum loss of electricity at extremely low temperatures, importance of which centers in missile development. Another research program was based on a grant of $46,849 awarded by the Army Ordnance Research. A pioneering soil study was undertaken, the results of which could affect military operations, agriculture, and civilian transportation.

Four years of study in the College leads to a B.S. degree in one of the three areas of engineering offered. The College graduates approximately eighty-five engineers each year. Of that number roughly 40% are mechanical engineers, 25% are civil engineers, and 35% are electrical engineers.

The student highlight of the year was the annual Engineer's Show. Held on March 20 and 21, the exhibition combined the talents and inventive abilities of engineers from all three departments.

woman's college

At a time when the role of women throughout the world is in a state of rapid change, the Woman's College of Duke is attempting to prepare its students to meet the challenge of a revolutionary age. Such a preparation necessitates education not only in the narrow, textbook sense but also in the broader concept of living together as a self-governing community. From the University as a whole, from her professors, from her scholastic endeavors, the Duke woman is offered the first kind of education; from the unique position of the Woman's College within the University, she may obtain the second.

The four years spent within the stone walls of East Campus are a sizeable and important portion of youth. The success or failure of those years in constructively directing the course of a woman's life after college are dependent on two factors—the efforts of the student herself and the efforts of those in authority to anticipate and meet her needs. So, in these pages, we present these two most vital component parts of the Woman's College—the deans of East Campus and the women they guided during 1958-59.

Women of long experience in the field of education comprise the deans' staffs of the College. Aside from education, their talents and interests extend into many other fields. Roberta Florence Brinkley, Dean of the Woman's College, combines administrative duties with the instruction in graduate work in English literature. Her special interest in this field is the poetry and prose of John Milton. When her work in East Duke Building and the classrooms is completed, she also finds the time to enjoy music and gardening.

Mary Grace Wilson, Dean of Undergraduate Women, shares with house counsellors and other associates the responsibility for non-academic affairs as they relate to student life. She is known to Duke Co-eds through her supervision of the social program, her advisory duties to College organizations, and her counselling of individual students.

Ellen Huckabee, a Duke alumna herself, advises freshman and sophomore women in her capacity as Dean of Undergraduate Instruction. She also serves as supervisor of the Freshman Advisory Council, and lists reading and travel in foreign countries as her "extracurricular" activities.

Marianna Jenkins, Associate Dean of Undergraduate Instruction, serves as academic counsellor to juniors and seniors. Her talent and interest in the fine arts are evidenced by the two classes—one in Renaissance painting and sculpture and the other in Seventeenth and Eighteenth Century Art—which she teaches.

Mrs. Frances M. Whitaker, as Assistant Dean of Undergraduate Women, coordinates her work with that of Miss Wilson. Professionally trained in guidance and personnel work, she supervises student employment and advises the treasurers of campus organizations.

Mrs. W. S. Persons is Director of Admissions for the Woman's College. She completed her undergraduate study at Duke and did graduate work both at Duke and the University of Pennsylvania.

Approximately 1150 co-eds composed the student body with whom these five women were concerned during 1958-59. Twenty-one per cent of the women enrolled in the Woman's College held scholarships valued at an average of $585.00 each.

The Freshman Class of 1958-59 reflected Duke's rising standards of admission. Of the three hundred and thirty co-eds who matriculated in the fall, some eighty-five percent graduated from high school in the top quarter of their classes. Geographically speaking, they also represented the character of the University as a whole. The majority came from the southeastern, middle east, and midwestern states, but the more remote areas of New England, the southwest, northwest, far west, and foreign countries were also represented.

Of those three hundred and thirty entering freshmen, approximately sixty-five per cent are expected to graduate. Among that sixty-five percent, the most popular major fields will probably be English, Education, History, and Sociology. What becomes of the Duke woman after graduation is a fact difficult to ascertain, but it is known that the most attractive vocation generally is marriage. It is also known that one of every five Duke alumnae will become the wife of a Duke alumnus. Signs of the changing times are noted in the increasing number of women who are marrying and yet remaining to complete their college careers; three per cent of the Woman's College occupied such a status during the past year.

Changing times require a changing University to fulfill the needs of the present and future generations of students. The acid test of Duke or of any of its component parts lies in its ability to recognize and meet this challenge. Specifically, the real measurement of worth of the Woman's College lies with those women who have passed beyond the walls of East Campus into the everyday business of living.

department heads

In order for the University to educate students in a more efficient manner, it has set up twenty-five departments into which the total educational sphere is broken into its specialized subject matter. To head each of these separate departments, the University has selected a man who is outstanding in his field and who has shown administrative talent.

John J. Gergen is the chairman of the department of Mathematics. In addition to its usual courses, the department has recently added several courses dealing in electronic computation in conjunction with the use of the IBM 650 computer.

The Physics department, headed by Walter M. Nielsen, is entirely housed in its own modern and well equipped building. The department is now engaged in many research activities such as spectroscopy in the gaseous, liquid and solid states, nuclear physics, high energy physics, and low temperature physics.

E. Willard Berry, who is now on leave in Australia, is the chairman of the department of Geology. Of the seventeen departmental majors, most of them are expected to go on to graduate work in geology or work for the oil and related industries.

The Botany department, headed by Henry J. Oosting, is now in a state of expansion waiting for the completion of its new building. There are usually ten undergraduate botany majors who after graduation continue for higher degrees in botany, teach, or become specialized technicians.

John H. Saylor is the chairman of the department of Chemistry which boasts a staff of twelve and almost one hundred departmental major students. Most of these students will go to medical school, do graduate work in chemistry, industrial research, technical sales, or teach. Keeping up with the present nuclear advances, the department is doing some research making use of radioactive isotopes.

The department of Zoology is headed by Karl M. Wilbur. Those students who major in Zoology go on to advanced graduate work in the department or to medical school.

The History department, with a staff of twenty-five, has two hundred and seventy students in its major program. Headed by John R. Alden, the department offers studies that are designed to afford an introduction to the study of history by a consideration of the history of the modern world, a more intensive study of general American history, and opportunities for more advanced study in phases of American, English, European, Hispanic-American, Russian, and Far Eastern history.

The general objective of the department of Political Science, headed by Robert S. Rankin, is to acquaint the student with the theory and practice of government and politics on local, state, national, and international levels. Areas open for study include political theory and comparative government, American government and public administration, and international law and relations.

The Economics and Business Administration department is headed by Frank de Vyver. The courses offered are grouped into three divisions: economics, accounting, and business administration. The economics courses are designed to develop in the student such critical and analytical skills as underlie the ability to understand economic problems and institutions. Accounting and business administration stress in a greater measure the knowledge and techniques useful to students preparing for a business career.

The Psychology department is headed by Eliot H. Rodnick who has a staff of twenty-eight to direct the studies of the one hundred and fifty major students. Of these, most students are expected to go on to graduate school in psychology, law, or medicine, or do psychological studies for industry.

The department of Sociology and Anthropology is headed by James C. McKinney. Work is offered in the fields of anthropology; community, race and culture; collective behavior; social organization and disorganization; social theory; and methods of research.

The Philosophy department is headed by Charles Baylis. Of the ten departmental majors, most are expected to go on to graduate work in philosophy, divinity school, medical or law schools. The courses offered fall into two general categories: the systematic treatment where the problem is presented by subject matter as logic, and the historical treatment where attention is directed more to the order of development in the thought of a particular philosopher.

Presiding over the German department is Herman Salinger. Of the seven professors on the staff, two are of German birth. The department, which has five undergraduates in its major program, is hoping to expand towards the Ph.D. degree in the next few years.

The Romance Language department, headed by Gifford Davis, offers many diversified courses in French and Spanish, with about twenty-five major students in each language. With a staff of twenty-five, the department is striving to strengthen the active knowledge of the languages and an expansion of the major program.

The Greek department is headed by James N. Truesdale. There are three departmental majors at the present time who are pre-ministerial students planning to continue their studies in theological seminaries. The department also offers courses in Greek history and literature to all students, not necessarily those who have a knowledge of the Greek language.

The department of Latin and Roman Studies is headed by Robert S. Rogers. At present there are two departmental majors. In addition to its language courses, the department also offers courses for students who wish by study in English to make the acquaintance of Roman antiquity from either a literary or an historical approach.

Ranson R. Patrick heads the department of Aesthetics, Art and Music. Students are afforded courses not only in theory, but also in practice through design laboratories, applied music, and through departmental organizations such as the Concert Band and the symphony Orchestra.

James Price heads the department of Religion which has eleven instructors, all of whom are ordained ministers. As chairman of the department, Dr. Price also is in charge of the one hundred and twenty-five students who have received scholarships for Christian vocations.

The English department is headed by Arlin Turner who has thirty-eight assistants on his staff. The department has recently instituted a new freshman program that has proven to be a success for both the students and the faculty. The new emphasis has been placed upon individual conferences and a closer student-professor relationship. The department offers studies in the areas of English composition, speech and drama, and English and American literature and language.

William H. Cartwright heads the Education department which turns out about 100 student teachers annually. In order to provide an up-to-date and accurate program, the department contacts the public schools as to curriculum, buildings, and finances as well as contacting professional educators on methods, change and development. The department has recently instituted a program whereby a student may obtain a Master of Arts in Teaching.

The Naval Science department, headed by Captain Robert V. R. Bassett, provides its 280 students with a curriculum arranged by the Naval Department. Duke is to be duly proud of the department, which is rated in the top ten of such ROTC units in the nation.

Heading the Air Science department is Colonel Raymond P. Todd whose duties are to insure that the academic program presented is in accordance with the policies of Duke University and that the students are admitted and commissioned in accordance with the policies of the AFROTC program established by the United States Air Force.

The Physical Education department for men, headed by Thomas M. Aycock, offers various activities for students in relation to the basic physical education requirements. With the completion of the Duke Golf Course, the department expanded its program to include this sport.

The Physical Education department of the Woman's College is headed by Julia R. Grout, who directs the many facets of the department such as the required physical education program, the major program, and health education. Most of the majors in the department enter high school teaching or, after graduate work, teach on the college level.

At the present time, the chairman of the Russian department has not been named.

Six graduate and professional schools currently compose the program of study available to graduate students at Duke. Several hold a nation-wide reputation for excellence in their fields. All are well equipped, both by virtue of their programs and staffs, to provide the graduate student with a maximum opportunity for scholastic achievement in his chosen area of study.

The Graduate School of Arts and Sciences, directed by Dean Marcus Hobbs, comprises the largest number of students in the graduate program. During the current academic year, 630 students worked toward the M.A. or Ph.D. degree in the 22 departments of the school. With a few exceptions, these departments cover most of the fields of study found on the undergraduate level. Requirements for the Master of Arts degree from the school include a minimum of a year and a summer, or a maximum of two years of study. To receive the Ph.D. degree, a student must have studied for at least a year after receiving his M.A.

Eighty per cent of the School's student body is male, while the current feminine twenty per cent shows a continued tendency to increase. Interesting to note is the fact that the modern tendency toward marriage while in school is reflected here, thirty per cent of the student body holding that status.

By way of contrast, the School of Forestry, with 61 students, is the smallest of the graduate and professional schools. Two types of degrees are offered—that of Master of Forestry, requiring one year of study beyond the undergraduate level, and that of Doctor of Forestry, necessitating a three year program of study. Facilities for advanced study in plant physiology, anatomy, taxonomy, ecology, and pathology; genetics; and several branches of zoology are available. Included among the special advantages of the School are the Duke Forest, the Arboretum, the School of Forestry Library, and various greenhouses and nurseries. Ellwood S. Harrar is Dean of the School for his second year.

The School of Law, established in 1924, prepares its students for the practice of law in any state. One hundred and fifty persons currently compose its student body. The most common type of degree conferred by the Law School is the L.L.B., acquired after three years of study. An additional year of work may lead to the attainment of the L.L.M. or Master of Laws degree. The highest honor conferred by the School is that of Doctor of Judicial Science, which necessitates completion of the Masters Degree with distinction and the subsequent publication of an acceptable piece of research.

Practical training is an important part of the School's program of study. Legal research and writing courses and moot court work in the first and second years are followed in the third by seminar courses emphasizing legal planning and drafting. The Legal Aid Clinic supplements textbook instruction by bringing students into contact with actual clients who qualify for free legal aid.

Elvin R. Latty, previously associated with the School as Acting Dean, this year permanently assumed the position of Dean of the School of Law.

The School of Nursing, under the direction of Dean Ann Jacobansky, is composed predominantly of undergraduate professional schools

nurses. Of the 300 students in the school, only nine are involved in graduate work. Four years of study on the undergraduate level leads to the Bachelor of Science Degree in Nursing, and, with an additional year of graduate work, the student may obtain a Master of Science degree.

In addition to their classroom education, the nurses gain practical experience through their work at Duke Hospital, the Durham Health Department, and the North Carolina Cerebral Palsy Hospital. Service to the Durham community is rendered through public health nursing.

The School of Medicine, an integral part of the Duke University Medical Center, was established in 1930. Its location in the same building with Duke Hospital is symbolic of the correlation between classroom study and actual work in the wards, laboratories, and operating rooms of the Hospital.

The average enrollment of the School is 315 students, 76 being admitted to the freshman class each year. Roughly twenty-five per cent of that student body completed their undergraduate studies at Duke.

Three types of degrees are among the most common conferred by the School. The degree of Doctor of Medicine is obtained upon the completion of four years of study within the School and two succeeding years of hospital or laboratory work. The Bachelor of Science Degree in Medicine is granted to those students who have completed two years of study and who have engaged in and reported upon creditable investigative work. A twenty-one months course in the School of Medicine is required for the degree of Bachelor of Science in Medical Technology.

Specialization is one of the outstanding traits of modern medicine, and the interests of Duke's medical students are indicative of this trend. General Surgery is currently the most popular field of concentration among graduates of the School of Medicine, while internal medicine, pediatrics, psychiatry, and various surgical and medical specialties represent other fields of interest.

Dr. Wilburt C. Davison, Dean of the School of Medicine, has held that position for more than thirty years.

The Divinity School ranks among the top ten theological schools in the nation. From an enrollment of some thirty students during 1926-27, the first academic year of the School, it has expanded to include a present student body of approximately 250. Contrary to popular belief, the School is not designed solely for those planning to enter the Methodist ministry. Both faculty and students are drawn from all Protestant denominations, including diverse groups such as Baptists, Methodists, Congregationalists, Disciples of Christ, and Episcopalians. Only ten per cent of the Divinity students are Duke graduates; the bulk of the remainder come from colleges and universities in the southeast, southwest, middle west, and North Atlantic states.

The degree of Bachelor of Divinity is granted to a student after ninety successful semester hours of study in prescribed and elective courses and upon the demonstration of a detailed knowledge of certain portions of the Bible. The Master of Religious Education degree is awarded to individuals desiring to engage in Christian Education who have completed sixty semester hours of graduate-professional work in the Divinity School.

The appointment of Robert Cushman as Dean of the Divinity School became effective in the fall of this year upon the retirement of Dr. James Cannon. Dean Cushman's prior connection with the School was in the capacity of Professor of Systematic Theology, a position he has held since 1945.

MR. CHARLES DUKES
Director of Alumni Affairs

Roger Marshall, Alumni Secretary, and Anne Garrard, Assistant Director of Alumni Affairs.

In its effort to maintain an active relationship with the more than 37,000 living alumni of the University, the Department of Alumni Affairs encompasses one of Duke's most extensive programs.

From the moment a student withdraws from the University, he becomes a member of an ever-growing family of alumni. His contact with and interest in the further development of his Alma Mater is maintained through a comprehensive series of activities. Most prominent among these are the class reunions held on such annual occasions as Homecoming, Founder's Day, Alumni Day, and Commencement. Both the quarterly Alumni Newsletter and the Alumni Register, published ten times yearly, are further important links between the University and its former students. The Loyalty Fund offers interested persons the opportunity to contribute financially to Duke's continuing growth.

1958-1959 saw further expansion of the scope of Alumni Activities. For the first time, graduates of the Medical School and the Law School held regular class reunions. An enlargement of the Alumni Affairs staff and the transferal of Roger Marshall from the position of Assistant to the Director to that of Alumni Secretary enabled the Department to undertake more extensive projects.

Mr. Charles Dukes, as Director of the Department, coordinates University life with the activities of eighty local alumni associations throughout the United States and abroad.

The Alumni Banquet during Homecoming offers delicious food and the opportunity to reminisce over the good ole years gone by.

The gathering place in any dormitory is the apartment of the house counselor. Regarded as companions and advisors, many of these women possess professional training in counseling and guidance. Some are themselves graduate students, working toward higher scholastic degrees.

An unusually high turnover in counselorships resulted in the addition of six new women to the Woman's College in this capacity at the start of the academic year. To Alspaugh House, in November, came Joanna Brannon Aldridge from Boone, North Carolina. She succeeded Miss Carolyn Herman. La Grange, Indiana contributed Sara Lee Curless to Addoms, while Millicent Demmin came east from Colorado Springs, Colorado to assume duties in Aycock House.

Other new additions in 1958-59 included Mrs. Mildred Durden, Brown House, from Twin City, Georgia; Genevieve James, Gilbert House, of St. Petersburg, Florida; and Betty Jo Strickland, Hampton, Georgia, counselor in Jarvis House.

Representing the largest collection of books and manuscripts in the South and the thirteenth largest among university libraries in the nation, the Duke Libraries are rightfully a source of pride and a vital part of the life of every member of the University community.

In addition to the General Library on West Campus and to the Woman's College Library, seven specialized collections of writings complete the assemblage. Among these the Medical, Law, Divinity School, Engineering, Biology-Forestry, Chemistry, and Mathematics-Physics Libraries. Each of these is under the supervision of a chief libraran and, with the exception of the libraries of the law and medical schools, all are under the centralized direction of Dr. Benjamin Powell, Head Librarian.

Approximately 1,343,768 catalogued volumes and 2,749,236 manuscripts and maps currently compose the Library collection of the University. These totals represent a long history of accumulation. Since the University's incorporation in 1924, the Libraries have received special emphasis, even during the lean days of Depression and often at the expense of other University needs. Last year $250,000 out of a Library budget of $629,000 paid for the addition of new books, and the figure is an annually increasing one. Most of the buying is done on request from faculty members and after extensive review of available purchases. Some five thousand books also come to the Libraries annually at the bequest of friends of the University.

To the books, manuscripts, and maps available to the student as resource materials may be added microfilm reels, recordings of speeches, etc., microcards, microprints, and musical sheets and scores. Among the fields of study in which Duke's collection of written works is particularly eminent are zoology; botany; chemistry; medicine; mathematics; physics; English and American literature; law; religion; English, French, American, and Southern history; political science; and economics.

A number of special collections of literature, some of world-wide fame, add a distinguished note of quality to the quantity of Library possessions. Of particular note are the Trent Collection of Walt Whitman, located in the Rare Book Room; the George Washington Flowers Collection of Southern Americana, which is noted for its early southern newspapers and Confederate imprints; the Lanson Collection of French Literature; the Mazzoni Library of Italian Literature; and the Velasco Collection of Peruvian Books and Manuscripts. Also found in the Rare Book Room is an assortment of ancient Biblical manuscripts, dating from the ninth through the fifteenth centuries, and consisting chiefly of texts from the New Testament.

Dr. Benjamin Powell, who heads the eighty-nine member staff of the University Libraries, holds a Bachelor of Library Science Degree from Columbia and a doctorate from Chicago University. He is currently serving as vice-president of the American Library Association and is president-elect of that organization for 1959-60.

Miss Florence Blakely, Reference Librarian of the West Campus Library

Miss Evelyn Harrison, Librarian of the Woman's College Library with Carolyn Morse.

HONORARIES EDITOR:

Walter Lambeth

MANY honors are on hand at Duke University to be awarded to those students who are so deserving in various fields. There are honors for service to the University, honors in athletics, honors in military training programs, honors for all-round ability in scholastic and extracurricular fields, honors for proficiency in specific subjects, and sixty honors for top grades, all of which stay with and help that honored student throughout life.

The first honor which comes to mind when thinking along the scholastic line, is that of Phi Beta Kappa, the oldest Greek letter organization (1776). This honorary was originally organized to cultivate friendship and the appreciation of literature, but now it holds the meaning of excellence in grades, and is the most coveted award offered to college students. Phi Beta Kappa also works for the student after graduation. Sometimes this key serves to unlock the door to graduate schools in law, medicine, business, academic, and other graduate fields. Or it may hold the power to open up job opportunities for the student, especially in fields where a high degree of knowledge is necessary or where only the top persons in that field are selected.

Another of the highly praised honors, awarded to students in their Senior year, is Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities. This is a recognition of excellence in academic and extracurricular activities, and is also a national honor. Students who are honored in this way find themselves listed in the annual book titled "Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities", with a condensed write-up containing the name of their college or university, followed by other honors received there. As Phi Beta Kappa, Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities serves as a key to open the door to graduate and professional schools, as well as aid the student in gaining desirable jobs.

Duke also offers two sophomore service honoraries, Beta Omega Sigma for the men of West, and Sandals for the women on East. Sophomores are honored, too, for scholastic achievement during their Freshman year, with two groups—Phi Eta Sigma on West, and Ivy of East.

Seven women and seven men, all seniors, are chosen for one of Duke's highest leadership distinctions in solemn tapping ceremonies. The women are selected for White Duchy, the men, for Red Friars. Santa Filomena, which recognizes seven senior nursing students, and Old Trinity Club, which honors men on West, are along the same line, all four being secret societies.

Honoring students for proficiency in specific subjects, Duke offers three honoraries for engineering students; one each in Spanish, German, and French; one for engineers or science and math majors; one for business administration and commerce; one for school spirit and athletic participation on East; one on West for those who have earned varsity letters; as well as those for Air Force and Navy ROTC honor cadets.

Omicron Delta Kappa is a senior men's honorary society founded at Duke in 1926. Tapped for membership are those students having high standards of scholarship, leadership, and character and having given service to the University. The purpose of the Rho Circle of Omicron Delta Kappa is three-fold: First, to recognize men who have distinguished themselves in campus activities and to inspire others to strive for similar attainments; second, to bring together the most representative men in all phases of collegiate life; and third, to unite the members of the faculty and student body of the institution on a basis of mutual interest and understanding.

Phi Kappa Delta, senior women's honorary, was founded in 1944 when members of Omicron Delta Kappa together with student leaders of the Women's College realized the need for a sister fraternity to Omicron Delta Kappa. At midnight of December 9, fifteen charter members were tapped into newly organized Phi Kappa Delta. Its purpose is to recognize women of outstanding achievement and to represent all phases of college activity. Phi Kappa Delta sponsors supper meetings with faculty members to discuss campus problems on an informal basis. In addition, guest speakers to discuss vocational opportunities are sponsored jointly with the senior class.

Beta Omega Sigma is the sophomore honorary fraternity initiating men who have demonstrated superior qualities of leadership and scholarship during their freshman year. The fraternity strives to promote wholesome student participation in campus activities and to encourage freshmen to develop and exercise leadership. In view of these aims, Beta Omega Sigma activities this past year included assisting the Y.M.C.A. with the freshman orientation program and cooperating in the promotion of Dink-Bow Day. In addition, Beta Omega Sigma sponsors, primarily for the freshmen, an annual dance with the Sandals. Members are tapped each spring for this honorary fraternity.

Sandals recognizes women of the rising sophomore class who have shown promise as leaders. Twenty members are chosen each spring on the basis of outstanding leadership, scholarship, and service. An auxiliary of W.S.G.A., Sandals was begun as a service organization and continues to function in that capacity. The members conduct tours of East Campus for prospective students and assist in planning and carrying out Orientation Week's program. Other small but valuable services for the University are performed, such as taking roll in assemblies and conducting campus elections. In the fall, Sandals sponsor a dance with their counterpart organization, Beta Omega Sigma.

In accordance with its aims to stimulate intellectual activity on campus, Phi Eta Sigma recognizes those students who demonstrate a high degree of potential ability early in their college career. Membership is extended to all freshmen who attain a 3.5 average their first semester or an overall 3.5 average their first year at Duke. Functioning as an active organization, the members during their sophomore year sponsor several projects designed to aid and encourage other students. This year the scholastic honorary began its activity by writing letters to incoming freshmen concerning studying in college. For freshmen who encountered great difficulties with their work, the members served as tutors in subjects for which they were well qualified. At mid-semester, Phi Eta Sigma held a dinner for all freshmen who had earned at least a B average. The members also graded the traditions tests taken by all freshmen and participated in freshmen assemblies.

Since its founding in 1937 by the class of 1940, Ivy has honored freshman women who have placed high academically. The members who become actives in their sophomore year must have attained an average of 3.25 for their first semester or for their entire freshman year. Ivy was instituted as a local scholastic honorary society with Mrs. W. S. Persons as the first advisor. From 1945 through 1953, Miss Ellen Huckabee was advisor and since 1954 Miss Maxine Westphal, Bassett House Counselor, has served in this capacity. Ivy endeavors to keep freshman average from being submerged in the deluge of social life and extracurricular activities. It has strived to encourage better scholarship and to stimulate intellectual curiosity among freshman women.

Activities throughout the year include supplying free tutors, marshalling at several Woman's College functions and donating books to the Woman's College Library. In November a dinner is given for all freshman women with a "B" average or better. Members of Ivy are inducted both in the fall and the spring by a tapping ceremony during a special awards assembly.

WHO'S WHO

One of the highest honors at Duke is to be elected to Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities. This is a directory designed to give national recognition to students having been of outstanding service to their school. This year fifty-two campus leaders from the senior class were chosen to be included. Mention on this list implies capacity for future success; therefore, Who's Who maintains a student placement service which provides opportunities for members to make important contacts in the business world.

sigma delta pi

EMILY FOOKS
President

Sigma Delta Pi, the University's Spanish honorary fraternity, is open to students taking Spanish courses of a 91 level or above. Prospective members must have maintained an overall "B" average in addition to a "B" average in all Spanish courses and must, of course, have an interest in Spanish language and culture. This chapter, Alpha Theta, was established at Duke in 1937. Its purpose is to promote better relations between Spanish and English speaking countries, to stimulate a deeper appreciation for Spanish contributions to culture, and to learn about opportunities for travel and employment in connection with this language. They also endeavor to reward those of their members who show specical attainments and interest in the study of Spanish. The group under the guidance of their sponsor, Senor Juan R. Castellano, meets monthly for meetings and lectures and also sponsors an initiation banquet and a spring dinner. Initiation for new members is usually held in the latter part of November.

GRAHAM HORNE
President

Founded at Duke University on May 17, 1931, Delta Phi Alpha is the honorary German fraternity. Its purpose is to recognize excellence in the study of German and to provide an incentive for higher scholarship. Delta Phi Alpha also promotes the study of the German language, literature, and civilization. Only German is spoken at the club meetings. This year the fraternity established a Stammtisch in the East Campus Union and invited Germans on the campus to an evening of deutsche Lieder. To qualify for membership in this honorary, a person must have a "B" average through his third year of German, an overall "C" average, and an interest in German culture. The sponsors of Delta Phi Alpha are Dr. Herman Salinger and Dr. Wolfgang Taraba. Graham Horne is the president. The fraternity usually meets about six times a year with the Duke and Carolina chapters sometimes meeting together for dinner and an evening of fun at the Rathskeller in Chapel Hill. Speakers and German films heighten interest in the meetings.

tau psi omega

CLAUDE JACK
President

Tau Psi Omega, the French honorary society which has members from both the East and West campuses, was founded in 1938. Now, as the time of its founding, the purpose of the society is to stimulate the interest of the members not only in the French language but also in the culture of the French people. This purpose is accomplished through group conversations, lectures, open houses, and attendance at motion pictures which have the dialogue in French. Eligibility in Tau Psi Omega comes through earning a "B" average in French, and acquiring an interest in the culture of the French. The ability to speak the language fluently is another of the society's requirements. This year, as has been the custom in former years, society members presented a French play. New members of Tau Psi Omega were entertained by the old members at an initiation dinner. Weekly dinner meetings were held in the East Campus Union, and occasional meetings were held for the members at the Rathskellar in Chapel Hill.

The Varsity D Club is an honorary for lettermen in all sports. The club is a relatively young organization which is striving to gain a solid, influential status of permanent recognition on the Duke University Campus. Its purpose is to provide a club for lettermen which enables them to engage in social and school activities, as well as to aid charity, as a group representing the athletes of Duke University. The club had a full year, including in their planned activities the election of a Dixie Classics Queen, the sponsorship of both Blue-White games, sponsorship of either a Heart Fund or Cancer Fund Drive, and two or three banquets. The club also planned a "Big Four" dance in the spring, with members of the letter clubs of Duke, North Carolina State, U.C.N., and Wake Forest having a joint dance with a big name band. To become a member of the Varsity D Club it is necessary to earn a letter in any sport and to pay yearly dues. The club was led this year by Bob Laverty, president.

Delta Phi Rho Alpha is a local honorary athletic society founded on the Duke campus in 1921. To answer the demands for better organization of athletic activities, a group of girls began the fraternity to give recognition to those who had excelled in women's sports. Since that date, Delta Phi Rho Alpha has strived to build up interest in sports and recreational activities on the Women's campus and to promote participation in intramurals. Rising juniors and seniors who have demonstrated outstanding interest and skill in at least two sports are eligible for membership; usually seven are selected each spring. A special assembly is held for the tapping.

The members are encouraged to take a leading role in sports and to exhibit good sportsmanship at all times. Instead of holding meetings, Delta Phi Rho Alpha suggests that members spend some time each week to further athletics. Each year the fraternity awards a gold key to the senior girl who has done the most to actively promote athletic participation.

FRANK W. SWOFFORD
Commander of Arnold Air Society

The Arnold Air Society is a nationally organized professional service honorary for AFROTC Cadets who plan to make their career in the Air Force. The society's membership requirements include an overall "C" average, demonstration of outstanding military leadership, and a high degree of interest in the AFROTC unit and its objectives.

The Arnold Air Society was founded in September, 1947, in honor of General H. H. "Hop" Arnold, Commanding General of the Army Air Forces during World War II. The William A. Sally Squadron of the Arnold Air Society was founded at Duke in 1950 and was named for Duke University's first AFROTC graduate to give his life in Korea.

The overall objective of the Society is to further the mission of the United States Air Force at the University level by encouraging a closer and more efficient relationship within the AFROTC and by advocating the concept of the USAF as a means of National Security.

This year many service projects have been carried out as well as several social functions, including the Military Ball.

Last year the midshipmen of the Duke NROTC founded the Corsairs. This society was organized to fulfill the need for an NROTC honorary fraternity; the Corsairs is the first organization of its kind. Its purpose is threefold: to recognize the outstanding NROTC students, to promote esprit de corps among the midshipmen of the Naval battalion, and to increase interest in the Navy within the University Community.

The first initiation for the Corsairs was held in January of 1958 and since that time the membership has increased to thirty members. Midshipmen must display outstanding Naval aptitude to be eligible for membership. In addition, a "B" average in Naval Science and an overall "C" average must be maintained. Only Juniors and Seniors are considered for the honorary.

Meetings of the Corsairs are held monthly and programs of special interest to the midshipmen are presented. Many feature Naval officers as speakers. In the future the Corsairs hope to strengthen their own bonds and eventually to expand into a national Naval honorary society.

alpha kappa psi

RICHARD HARRIS
President

Alpha Kappa Psi, founded at Duke in 1904, is a national fraternity in the field of commerce and business administration. It endeavors to promote a better student-faculty relationship and to supplement the student's formal education through research projects and professional programs. To qualify for membership a student must major in the business field, express a firm desire to become a member of Alpha Kappa Psi, and maintain a "C" average. A resume of this year's activities includes a talk by Mr. Irving of a brokerage firm in Durham on investment clubs throughout the country, a speech on insurance by Dr. Saville of the business department, dinner meetings at the Castle, a visit to the Federal Reserve Bank and the Dupont Company in Richmond, and the formal dance held in the spring. A scholarship key and a certificate are awarded each spring to the senior with a business major who has maintained the highest average for three years, and a civil award is presented to the outstanding member of the fraternity each year.

Knights
St. Patrick

The Order of Saint Patrick was founded in 1945 after World War II by the Engineering Student Government when it was realized that interest and pride in the School of Engineering needed to be stimulated. The society was organized with these objectives in mind: to recognize those men who have attained a high standard of character and leadership in engineering activities, to promote good fellowship and understanding among its members and to stimulate interest and participation in engineering activities.

Junior and Senior engineering students are eligible for membership in the Order. Scholastic eligibility stems from a point system and on this basis, along with qualifying standards of leadership and character, students are tapped into the Order of Saint Patrick. Initiation takes place both in the fall and spring.

Meetings are held monthly and a pledge banquet is held twice a year. The Order of Saint Patrick with Tau Beta Pi also jointly sponsors silde rule lectures for new engineering and math students.

STEPHEN RUDISILL
President

Tau Beta Pi is a national engineering honorary society for junior and senior undergraduate engineering students who have evidenced outstanding character and high academic standing. In the Duke chapter, students in the top twelve percent of the junior class and the highest twenty-five percent of the senior class are eligible for membership. In addition, three honor students are selected for membership the first semester of their junior year. Tau Beta Pi was founded on the principle that students who have conferred honor upon their Alma Mater by distinguished scholarship and exemplary character as undergraduates in engineering should be fittingly rewarded. Dual-purposed, the honorary also strives to foster a spirit of liberal culture in the engineering colleges of America. Tau Beta Pi holds meetings once a month, and for the benefit of new engineers and other persons interested, the honorary sponsors annual lectures on correct silde rule procedure. Members are tapped for Tau Beta Pi in the fall and spring and, on each occasion, they are honored by an initiation banquet.

JEFF McANALLY
President

Pi Tau Sigma, the honorary fraternity for Mechanical Engineers, was founded on May 13, 1944. "To promote the professional welfare of its members and to foster the high ideals of the engineering field" is the purpose of the fraternity.

During the year the Pi Tau Sigmas sponsor the Engineer-in-Training exam. Both in the fall and spring, they sponsor an initiation banquet. In the Engineer's Show, at which Pi Tau Sigmas act as guides, the fraternity sponsors an exhibit. They also make awards of the MARKS HANDBOOK to the outstanding sophomore M.E. and the senior M.E. who present the best papers, either in class or in professional society competition.

Members of Pi Tau Sigma are chosen from the top fourth of the junior class and the top third of the senior class on the basis of scholastic achievement, character, citizenship, and professional interest.

President William J. McAnally, III, presides at the meetings which are held once a month.

kappa kappa psi

Kappa Kappa Psi is the national music honorary. The local Duke chapter was founded in 1922 and existed until 1945. After a brief period of inactivity, the present club in the past two years has grown once again into a strong chapter.

To recognize outstanding musicians and band members is the purpose of Kappa Kappa Psi. Members of any of the several University musical groups are eligible to join the honorary. As one of its activities the fraternity plays host to bands of visiting football teams, often furnishing refreshments after the games. Kappa Kappa Psi helps sponsor and make arrangements for the annual High School Band Day. Each year the honorary sends several band members to participate in the National Intercollegiate Band, a group composed of outstanding band members from all over the country and featuring a well-known guest conductor.

Kappa Kappa Psi holds meetings twice monthly, sponsoring, in addition, a banquet in the spring for its members. Under the capable direction of its advisor, Dr. Paul Bryan, the honorary has enjoyed a highly successful year.

sigma pi sigma

Sigma Pi Sigma is the national fraternity designed to give recognition to outstanding students of physics. On May 14th, 1945, the second chapter of this national honorary was founded here on the Duke Campus. Since that time, Sigma Pi Sigma has functioned on campus to promote the study of physics and mathematics. The several purposes of the honorary fraternity are: to recognize superior scholarship in physics, to strengthen association among those who are interested in this science, and to encourage and stimulate all scientific work. Requirements for membership demand that candidates have a B average in math or physics at the end of their sophomore year. The program this year included, in addition to monthly meetings, a trip to the National Bureau of Standards. The society also sponsored public lectures.

psi chi delta

To recognize achievement in Psychology and to stimulate interest in the field by lectures, projects, seminars and social functions are the principle goals of Psi Chi Delta, the Psychology Honorary of Duke.

Founded in April, 1957, it was intended as a bi-partite "Psychology Club," open to anyone interested in Psychology and a select "Psychology Honorary," open to majors in that area who could meet certain scholastic criteria. Reorganization in September 1958, however, resulted in its present status as an honorary, with only a selected associate membership.

The varied program of functions this year sponsored by Phi Chi Delta is indicative of its wide scope of activity. Typical of the numerous lectures for its membership, which are open to the public, was that of Dr. Weston Le Barre who discussed "Snake Cults; a Study in Psycopathology."

pi mu epsilon

Pi Mu Epsilon, a national mathematics honorary fraternity, stimulates interest and promotes scholarship in mathematics. Founded at Duke in 1932, this chapter had the distinction of being the first one of its kind in North Carolina. It is open to students in the College of Engineering or students with majors in the departments of chemistry, mathematics, and physics. In order to qualify for election to membership, a person must have an overall "B" average and a "B" average in math through Math 52, which is the second semester of calculus. Last year Pi Mu Epsilon had two meetings, both for the initiation of new members. In November a speaker from the Employment Bureau discussed opportunities for both permanent and summer jobs for those interested in math. The group heard a talk last April about computers and their programming, and made a tour of the computer lab. Dr. F. G. Dressel is the sponsor of Pi Mu Epsilon. Director of the fraternity is Carol Cleave. Other officers are as follows: Vice Director, Dennis Theriot; Secretary, Sarah Thomas; Treasurer, Elaine Fowler.

ERUDITO et Religio"—the motto which Duke students wear on their blazers, see on the seal of the University, and hear in lectures and sermons. True, it is meant as the tie-in between the University's academic work and the religious foundation of Duke, but it might have an additional translation read into its meaning—that of the joining of academic education with an extra-curricular education which includes groups founded upon and associated with religion and religious principles.

Duke University not only seeks to educate its students with a slate of academic courses, but through the extracurricular work done in various organizations, Duke hopes to give the students a feeling of responsibility and leadership—an education in itself. By entering into student activities, a student learns to follow or to lead, to accept responsibility, and to learn to do things which are not taught in the regular curriculum, such as in publications, radio, drama, and government.

In the field of organizations, Duke might be compared to a small town composed of varied business concerns, religious groups, clubs, and activities. These small groups might be like the neighborhoods from which Duke students come, enabling the students to gain friends, to know and be known, while working and learning together.

One of the main organizations on campus is the "Y"—a religiously based activity. The YMCA on West, and the YWCA on East, under separate student leadership, but working together to enrich the religious life of its members, serve to promote religious group activity. Along this same line are other groups which promote religious fellowship, including Chapel Choir, Kappa Chi, and the various denominational groups.

Under the leadership of student governments of Duke, MSGA on West, WSGA on East, and Engineers' Student Council, the students govern themselves; and through the Judicial Boards of East and West, the students endeavor to understand and obey the rules of the University. Then, too, the three colleges, Trinity, Woman's, Engineering, have advisory groups to help freshmen through that overwhelming first year.

Student Union centers its far-reaching attention on a life of balanced activities for the students, including student-cast shows, big name groups, recreation, culture, and educational interests. Other groups try to keep the students informed on regulations concerning traditional dress and conduct of Duke students.

Pub Row offers a yearbook, thrice-weekly newspaper, literary magazine, and a magazine for entertainment. There are specialized organizations, too, where students may find friends who are aiming for the same academic or professional goals. And there are groups who sing, dance, act, play musical instruments, march with music, or entertain. Other groups debate, plan big weekends, help others, cheer for Duke, or offer the students their own radio station.

There is an organization at Duke to satisfy every interest and develop every talent. The only requirement for membership is a genuine interest and willingness to work. The rewards are endless.

BOB TORRAY
President

men's student government association

The Men's Student Government Association took on a new look this year with the institution of the Student Senate. This streamlined body, which replaced the old forty-five man legislature, is composed of the government association officers plus two representatives from each class. The Student Senate functions as the supreme instrument of government in regulating the affairs of the men students on West Campus. In addition to its legislative powers, the Senate has the power to regulate, supervise, charter, and determine the status of all men's student campus clubs and organizations, to impeach elective and judicial officers, and to supervise all M.S.G.A. elections. The Senate is the sounding board for student opinions and, concerning matters of campus wide importance, may meet in joint session with the Inter-Fraternity Council, the Independent Dormitory Council and the Freshman Council to formulate general policies. The Senate has served, in fulfilling its duty, to "further the activities of student life, to promote a widespread interest in student affairs, and to develop a greater spirit of progressive citizenship" on the Duke campus.

The highest function of M.S.G.A. is to represent student opinion in student-faculty-administration relations. Every male undergraduate student of Duke University is a member of the association and may request Senate consideration of any and all problems which he feels have significance to Duke community living. By channeling ideas from a variety of sources, M.S.G.A. is in a position to detect the important trends in student thought. By appealing directly to the student body through the Chronicle and by confering with faculty and administration members, the group serves as the campus voice in initiating and promoting necessary improvements.

Among the numerous projects undertaken by the M.S.G.A. this year were the streamlining of election procedures, the institution of an honor code in graduate level courses, the completion of the safety project for Myrtle Drive, and the representation of student interests in an unsuccessful attempt to maintain the unlimited cut system, and remove the restrictions on alcoholic beverages at University-sanctioned social functions.

Patterned after the national government, the M.S.G.A. consists of executive, legislative, and judicial branches. The Student Senate, which meets regularly to consider matters of a campus-wide nature, is the legislative branch. It has the power to enact rules necessary for the effective initiation of its programs. The judicial branch consists of the Men's Judicial Board and its subsidiary, the Court of Appeals. This branch, acting as a campus disciplinary organ, upholds the regulations of the University. Judges are appointed for a one year term by the incoming president with approval of two-thirds of the Senate. In these bodies are vested the powers of interpreting the Constitution and by-laws, determining the legal jurisdiction of subordinate councils, reviewing Senate legislation, judging and setting penalties for infractions of rules, and trying Association members who have been impeached. The executive, directed by the president who is assisted by the other elected officers, carries out the administrative duties of the organization. Headed by President Bob Torray, the association officers this year were Vice-President Warren Wickersham, Secretary Fred Grover, and Treasurer Mack Sharpe.

PATSY LEE
President

The fifteen solemn looking girls vested in black robes who preside at monthly W.S.G.A. assemblies may look very awesome and forbidding to freshmen, but the upperclassmen know them as friendly co-eds holding a special honor and responsibility.

They are representatives of the Women's Student Government Association which is composed of the entire East Campus. As expressed by president Patsy Lee, "W.S.G.A. endeavors to realize the needs of students, direct student activities, and legislate on matters pertaining to the student association."

The Executive Council, four class representatives, and the auxiliaries work together to reach this objective. These auxiliaries include the House Presidents' Board, Freshman Advisory Council, Social Standards Committee, National Student Association, Judicial Board, Coordinate Board, Foreign Student Committee, Student Forum Committee, and the Campus Chest.

W.S.G.A. assemblies are held on the first Monday of each month and are the only place where the entire East Campus

women's student government association

student body is brought together. In these assemblies co-eds learn all important new issues and discuss any pending old business. At this time they are given an opportunity to voice their opinion for or against these issues. By this self government students are able to feel the responsibility which living in a democracy entails.

Each girl is given a chance to share the executive responsibility of W.S.G.A. Through the class representatives, various committees necessary for the functioning of W.S.G.A. are set up; and by donating a few hours of her time a week to office work or social planning, a co-ed may aid the association.

Relying on the Council's "bufferin-action," the Woman's College student is saved the headache of the difficult problems which make government necessary. Through cooperation with the M.S.G.A. Council and Judicial Board, W.S.G.A. instituted an Academic Honor Code on the 200 level courses in a sizeable number of classes. Also the ancient and controversial drinking rule problem was tackled with renewed vigor, and student-administration discussions on student responsibility were held.

One of the most important services rendered by W.S.G.A. is the annual publication of the Woman's College Handbook. This book is invaluable to the entering freshmen for information on various campus activities. It also contains an academic calendar, W.S.G.A. regulations, and a description of all student activities. Each year W.S.G.A. prepares a block exam on its regulations which is given to the freshman class.

Among other projects, their activities include the replacement of the Honor Code by the Code of Campus Living, fund-raising projects for the Foreign Student Fund, re-evaluation of the point system, active participation in the National Student Association, and the sending of three delegates to N.S.A. Congress at Ohio Wesleyan.

The forefathers of W.S.G.A. date back to 1919 when the Woman's College organized the first student government distinct from the men's activities. In 1924 when the University incorporated the Woman's College, W.S.G.A. was founded.

judicial boards

The Men's Judicial Board was organized in 1948 as the Judicial Branch of Men's Student Government Association. Its stated purpose is to implement the regulations of Duke University with fair enforcement. However, its objectives include the maintenance of high standards of good judgment and conduct by Duke students, and the assumption by the students, collectively and individually, of a sense of personal responsibility. In attaining these objects it has become perhaps the strongest and most respected organ of student government.

The Board, consisting of six senior and three junior members, meets on Wednesday nights for trials at which the majority of the cases are of a disciplinary nature involving undergraduate men who have violated campus rules and regulations. The defendant is given every chance to prove his innocence, and unless he requests that it be open, the trial is closed to protect him. The board also handles appeals from IFC, Court of Appeals and Traditions Board.

The Woman's College Judicial Board was organized as a Branch of the Student Government of Duke University in 1949. It is responsible for explaining and interpreting regulations to the members of the college and for making recommendations to the college administration about rule changes which the student body desires. The board also handles violations of honor and infractions of rules by members of the Woman's College. Although its obvious function is disciplinary in nature, the Board also operates to instill a sense of good judgment and personal responsibility in East Campus women. In addition to routine activities, the Judicial Board has done considerable work on a University Academic honor code beginning with 200-level courses, investigation and recommendation concerning University social regulations, and re-evaluation of the Woman's College Honor Code. The membership consists of a chairman and secretary elected by the student body, a representative from each dormitory and the Town Girl's Club, and the W.S.G.A. president as an ex-officio member.

freshman advisory councils

DON PENNY
Senior Chairman Y-FAC

For the second consecutive year the Freshman Advisory Council was sponsored entirely by the YMCA. Formerly, the Y-Man program functioned only during Orientation Week, with FAC's taking over the advisory program when classes began. This caused much confusion among the freshmen who received new advisors. The reorganization of the Y-Man and FAC programs was successful, giving freshmen the advantage of keeping the same upperclass advisor throughout the year. The purpose of the Y-FAC is to help the freshmen become adjusted to college life by advising him on academic, social, religious, and extra-curricular activities. During Freshman Week the Y-FAC and the YWCA co-sponsored the Y-Dance for freshmen, ending Orientation Week. Throughout the first semester each freshman was advised by his Y-FAC, visiting once each week. The Y-FAC's also prepared a handbook which will serve as a guide for future advisors. The 72 Student Advisors were led by chairman Don Penny, Jr. and junior chairmen Bob Cline, Boyd Hight, and Ed King.

MARY ALICE CHILD
Chairman

The Woman's Advisory Council plays an important role on campus also. Each spring, on the basis of outstanding character, service, leadership and scholarship, rising juniors and seniors are chosen for council membership. This year, under the chairmanship of Mary Alice Child, each of the fifty-two FAC's was given charge of from six to eight freshmen—an FAC group. The purpose of the FAC was to evaluate her two or three years of college experience at Duke for each freshman and to act as her neverfailing source of information, advice, and guidance. The FAC was one of the first persons to greet the freshman upon her arrival and gave her individual assistance during Orientation Week. By living close to her group, the FAC helped each girl make scholastic and social adjustments in her first year, providing the foundation for a happy and profitable college career. Meeting with the freshmen throughout the year as problems arose, the Freshman Advisory Council also co-operated with other groups on campus for freshmen programs.

student union

Although the Student Union has only been in existence for four years here at Duke, it has become a very important organization. Founded on a gift of over a quarter of a million dollars, the Student Union had the Administration Building renovated. It was renamed Flowers Building after a former president of the University, a man who showed great interest in the students' leisure-time activities. This is now the center of the Union's operations.

On the first floor there is a spacious lounge where students can gather for relaxation and pursuit of leisurely interests. This room is furnished with the latest magazines and newspapers. Separate from the lounge are small alcoves with card tables for bridge or quiet study. There is a music lounge, too, boasting excellent Hi-Fi equipment and a fine record collection for student use. The University information center and campus and outside telephones are also located here.

Conference rooms and offices for various campus organizations are located on the second floor. The offices of Mr. William Griffith, Director of Student Activities, and Mrs. Lanier Pratt, Student Union Program Director, are found on this floor. The clacking of typewriters can be heard coming from the third floor—known as "Pub-Row." Nearly all campus publications' offices are found here.

The Game Room is located in the basement, one of the most popular areas of the Union. The facilities available for table tennis and billiards are always in use.

It is the program, as stated in its constitution, that best carries out the purposes of the Duke Student Union: ". . . to stimulate, promote, and develop the social, recreational, cultural, educational, and spiritual activities of Duke University. To these ends shall the program of the Student Union be administered."

The Student Union, in order to administer this program, is organized in a simple, but efficient structure. The Board of Advisors is composed of eleven members from the faculty and administration. The Board of Governors, made up of eleven students, Mr. Griffith and Mrs. Pratt, serve as the policy-making body and coordinates the activities of the standing Union Committees. The Board of Chairmen, which is responsible to the Board of Governors, is comprised of the chairmen appointed to each of the seven Union committees. Each committee in turn is composed of as many members as the Chairman thinks necessary. It is within the committees that the various Union activities are originated, carefully planned, and finally presented to the student body. These committees embrace all phases of student life, and their activities are designed to appeal to the various tastes prevailing on the Duke Campus.

Each of the seven Union committees has its share of responsibilities. The Recreation Committee sponsors dance lessons, chess, checkers, billiard, and table tennis tournaments, away football movies, and the Game Room. The Social Committee aims to better East-West-Nursing School relations through a full, but "casual" program. It plans such activities as Candlelight Cabarets, Open Houses, street dances, informal dances and picnics, and the Fraternity-Sorority Sing. The Educational Affairs Committee strives to provide Duke students with stimulating and educational experiences which will supplement classroom learning. It schedules such activities as speakers, debates, student panels, and educational films. The Music and Arts Committee furthers campus interest in the Fine Arts. This year it sponsored, among other things, Jazz '59. The maintenance of Flowers Building is under the House Committee. Along with providing current periodicals, maintaining bulletin boards, and publishing a Newsletter, this committee offers the services of the Ride Bureau for travel during vacations.

Major Attractions Committee seeks to please the entire student body by planning only the best in entertainment and by bringing the most renowned personalities of the day to the Duke Campus. This committee presented such 'Big Shows" as Candide and the Diary of Anne Frank. News of the Union and its activities is spread by the Publicity Committee. By the use of posters, "floaters," WDBS, the Duke Chronicle, newspapers, radio and television, the committee is able to broadcast its information. On the second floor of the Flowers Building the committee does its art work, using a silk screen process, printing equipment, mimeograph machines, drawing tables, prints and inks. Half of the committee works in the art department while the other half concerns itself with news releases.

It is apparent that the entire Flowers Building, under one administrative organization, Student Union, is devoted to facilitating the work of campus organizations and to the enjoyment and relaxation of everyone at Duke.

BETTY SIME
Chairman

Coordinate Board was created as a W.S.G.A. auxiliary and receives funds from W.S.G.A. The chairman serves as an active member on Council and carries projects from Council to the Board. The purpose of the organization is to act as an intermediary between the administration, faculty, and student body. The Board is a focal point wherein student opinions of an academic and campus organizational nature can be polled and investigated, and recommendations formulated.

Not only did the Board conduct registration for East Campus, but it also perfected a new method of signing up to register. Some of the Board's activities were College Convocations, homemaking and secretarial courses, a tutoring system, ticket sales for foreign student movies, and letters to all faculty members about general faculty-student relations. The membership is composed of one member from each dormitory, four members at large, and three freshmen. All classes are represented. Meetings of the Board are held every Friday at five P.M. in the W.S.G.A. Council room.

women's college student forum

BILLIE JEAN HOLMAN
Chairman

The Student Forum strives to enrich the cultural life of the University community by bringing in artists and speakers who are outstanding in their fields, but may not be already familiar to the student. It was first established as an auxiliary of WSGA to present a forum of noted lecturers to the Woman's College Campus. The purpose has since expanded to include drama and dance groups, musical organizations, and art exhibits, as well as speakers.

In a varied program of events, the Forum once again sponsored the Canadian Players, who performed "The Devil's Disciple" by Shaw. February was designated as Arts' Month with contemporary art as the theme. The different phases of the subject were explored through an art exhibit and lectures concerning contemporary art, poetry, and music. The year was climaxed by a "Meet the Artist" program in April. After a regular concert with the Duke Symphony Orchestra, pianist Gunnar Johannsen met informally with Duke student to play and discuss selected pieces from his repertoire.

social standards committee

The Social Standards Committee, a special WSGA auxiliary, was established in 1927 for two purposes: to foster high social standards in dress and action among students of the Woman's College, and to maintain a full social calendar for the school year. The Committee publishes each year the Design for a Duchess which contains helpful regulations and hints about social behavior on East Campus. Social Standards sponsors annually the two Coed Balls which feature the CHANTICLEER Beauty Court in the winter and the May Court in the spring. The Committee also publishes and sells a pictorial Duke Calendar each year. The Committee is composed of two representatives from each dormitory and the Town Girls' Club, two freshmen from the campus-at-large, and the president of WSGA acting in "ex-officio" capacity. Betsy Grant served as chairman of Social Standards this year.

The Campus Chest is Duke's equivalent to the United Fund. Its purpose is to solicit contributions from the students, once a year, for worthwhile charitable organizations.

This year a Contemporary Card theme was used during the concentrated three-day drive on East Campus. The goal set was $3,000. The organizations which received contributions this year included the Foreign Student Fund, the Alice M. Baldwin Scholarship, American Friend's Service Committee, World University Service, American Cancer Society, Student Emergency Fund, Durham Needlework Guild, North Carolina Society for Crippled Children and Adults, and the YWCA Edgement project. They were chosen by WSGA and the budget was approved by the entire Women's College student body.

The West Campus Chest Fund, with a history of highly successful drives, took place in the spring. Its goal was also set at $3,000. Charitable organizations are chosen as the result of personal interviews with the representatives of interested organizations by the executive committee of the West Campus Chest Fund.

Headed by Marlene Tindall on East and Brian Thiessen on West, the individual drives received an even better response than in past years.

MARION SAPP
NSA Coordinator

In spite of a brief three years' history on the Duke Campus, the National Student Association has achieved a position of importance in influencing campus affairs. Its main purpose is to aid all student organizations and the student body in attaining both their educational and extracurricular aims, in addition to providing a voice for student opinion.

Included in a wide range of activities this year were parliamentary procedure classes, work with the Co-ordinate Board on the problem of student-faculty relationship, and cooperation with campus organizations on a campus wide educational affairs project. As a service to the University community NSA compiled a list of all campus organizations, their purposes, and their achievements. Delegates were sent to the 11th annual NSA Congress in Delaware, Ohio and to the spring and fall regional assemblies where they exchanged ideas and projects with representatives from schools across the nation.

Serving as NSA Coordinator this year was Marian Sapp. The remaining membership of NSA is composed of representatives from each East Campus dormitory, two members at large and three freshman representatives.

court of appeals

Now in its fourth year of operation, the Court of Appeals was established as a subsidiary to the Judicial Board to review cases of appeals involving University traffic regulations, liabilities for damaged University property, and delinquency in the payment of student government fees.

Meeting on alternate Thursday nights, the five justices of the court give personal consideration to each case on the docket, and are usually able to reach a fair decision without the appearance of the defendant. Because of its high position in the legal hierarchy of the Duke judicial system, the Court of Appeals will remain a vital part of student government.

traditions board

The Traditions Board sponsors for the University an orientation program for the freshmen that includes the teaching of school songs, cheers, customs, traditions, history, and the distribution of dinks to all freshmen. Early in the fall all freshmen are required to take the annual traditions test, and those who fail to score a passing grade on it are brought before the board. During the year hearings are also held for other delinquent freshmen. Through this extensive program the Traditions Board seeks to establish a vivid feeling of class unity and strong school spirit in each freshman class.

The Young Men's Christian Association, with a total membership of more than 80,000, is the largest student organization in the world. The Duke YMCA was established in 1887 and has continually increased in activity and importance since that time.

The purpose of the Duke YMCA is to stimulate an active discussion of the problems facing the Christian in the University community and in the world and to seek an effective solution for these problems. Carrying this discussion into actual works, the group offers a program of practical jobs through which its members might seek to be an effective Christian witness to their community. By proving itself useful, by being of service, by selecting men of the highest type for its leadership, the "Y" tries to promote serious and sober thinking as well as active and wholesome works.

The main ideals of the "Y" purpose are the following: to lead students to faith in God as revealed in Jesus Christ, to promote their growth into mature Christian faith, to foster the acceptance of their Christian responsibility in the world today, to promote wholesome social relations at Duke University, and to render service to the whole University community.

The Duke YMCA strives to include the entire student body in its membership. About eighty percent of the freshman class joins annually. Students may hold membership in either of two classes: Executive or Associate. The Executive members are those who show an active interest in the work of the "Y" by participating in its planned program. They may serve either on the Freshman or Senior Cabinet and help to plan the various service and social activities. Associate members while not participating in the active work, recognize the value of the "Y" and the place it holds in a man's life and evidence their adherence to its principles.

Freshmen are first introduced to the work of the YMCA through the Y-FAC program, which is sponsored by the "Y." Eighty upperclassmen, chosen on the basis of personal interviews, assist each freshman and transfer student in adjusting and adapting to college life. The program begins during Orientation Week and continues throughout the year. Y-FAC men proctor entrance exams, assist in registration, and personally advise each freshman concerning his academic and personal problems.

During the football season, the "Y" plays host to the fathers of the students at the Dads' Day activities. This fall the fathers and sons watched the Duke-Georgia Tech game, which was followed by a banquet in honor of the fathers. Sharing in the routine college life, the fathers attended classes, met administrators and professors, and attended a special Sunday Morning Chapel Service.

The YMCA plays an integral part in the religious life of the University. Its program is the practical expression of the student's religious ideals. On Thanksgiving Day, the YMCA annually sponsors a special church service in the University Chapel.

Opportunities for personal service are available to the members. Students may work in the afternoons at such charitable institutions as the Edgemont Community Center and the Wright's Refuge Community and play an important part in making such services possible for needy persons.

In addition to these functions, the "Y" also maintains certain services for students. Its members visit with hospitalized students, sponsor the Student Activities bulletin board, and publish the "Duke University Handbook," as well as a student directory which contains the names and addresses of all undergraduate students. The "Y" office which is located in Flowers Building serves as an information bureau for all activities.

The future of the Young Women's Christian Association lies in the hands of the women of Duke University. The YWCA is an all inclusive organization whose goal is to enrich the lives of all young women. The "Y'" on East Campus has a long history of service to the students of the Women's College. Since the YWCA includes the majority of women students, its program is broken down into two separate, yet closely inter-related groups: The "Big Y," comprised of members from the sophomore, junior and senior classes and the Freshman "Y." In addition, the "Y" program has been introduced this year to the nurses of Hanes House, in an attempt to cement the relationship between this group and East Campus women.

Under the leadership of President Phyllis Stevens, the YWCA opened the fall semester program during Orientation Week. Meeting trains, planes and buses, the "Y" girls began a week of service which concluded with the traditional "punch-bunches." Soon after Freshman Week, the annual membership drive went into action and co-eds were urged to "join the crew, the 'Y' needs you." In cooperation with the YMCA, the organization sponsored the well-known "Bishop's Players," who performed Christopher Fry's "Boy With a Cart," followed by "workshop' interviews with the actors.

The Woman's College was represented by ten delegates at the sixth national YWCA-YMCA student assembly held at the University of Illinois.

Parent-Daughter Weekend in the spring enabled the Woman's College students to give their parents a greater insight into college life. Enlivened by concerts, luncheons, and teas, Parent-Daughter replaced the Mother-Daughter Weekend of previous years.

The Freshman "Y," advised by Ginny MacIvor, conducted four study committees including "What Broadway Is Saying to the Church," a discussion group designed for those who were interested in contemporary theater.

The Senior Seminar aided by Chairman Nancy DeLong sought answers to such problems as "How Can I Choose a Church?" which face seniors after graduation.

The Campus and Public Affairs Committee led by Chairman Marion Rice prepared a series of factual articles entitled "The Global Spotlight" which was published weekly in the Chronicle. Judy Austin made the Worship Committee a vital part of campus religious life, through the Christian Madrigal Vespers and a Lenten folder. Seven major agencies in the Durham area received the assistance of the Service Committee headed by Carol Corder. Other opportunities for service were provided by Sarah Northington's Edgemont Committee, whose members volunteered to help with teaching, sports, and handicraft at the Community Center. The Race Relations chairman Jane Mack and her committee sought the meaning of brotherhood through a study of the Negro problem in America and racial tensions in other areas of the world. Publicity Chairmen Sandy Sumner and Catherine Clark kept the campus informed of "Y" activities through hundreds of posters and floaters. The YWCA newspaper, the Live Y'er, was edited by Ruth Johnson and published in correlation with outstanding "Y" events.

The Senior and Freshman Cabinets and Advisor Barbara Bennedict carried out individual programs, retreats, and conferences.

Since its earliest history, the YWCA has been serving the needs of the campus. It welcomes into its membership anyone who feels that she may subscribe to the YWCA purpose; to realize full and creative life through growing knowledge of God, to have a part in making this life possible for all people, and to seek to understand Jesus and to follow him.

life at duke university

Religious life at Duke is organized and functions in two dimensions. One dimension is interdenominational and it functions chiefly through the Chapel and the University Religious Council. The other dimension is the denominational, functioning through the sectarian groups which are organized on campus for week-to-week activities, studies, services, and religious education.

The focal point of campus religious life and thought is the Duke University Chapel. Located in the center of West Campus, the Chapel is a constant reminder of the place of religion in a well balanced life. Each Sunday the University sponsors a widely attended service of worship in the Chapel. A choir of two hundred voices, predominately students, provide an inspiring background for the service. Sermons are delivered by the Dean of the Chapel, the Chaplain to the University, members of the faculty in the Undergraduate Department of Religion and the Divinity School, and outstanding guest preachers from throughout the world. Although participation in religious life is entirely voluntary, students and faculty of all faiths achieve a sense of spiritual unity and growth by worshipping together.

The denominational programs on campus afford representation of a variety of religious beliefs. Five of these denominations are served by ordained denominational ministers, who serve on a full-time basis as chaplains to their particular groups. These are the Methodist, Episcopal, Presbyterian, Baptist, and Lutheran groups. Others having the benefit of part-time professional service are the United Student Fellowship, the Newman Club, and the Hillel Foundation. Volunteer faculty advisors serve the Society of Friends, the Christian Science Organization, and the Unitarian Fellowship.

Part of the denominational program is carried on in the various facilities offered by the University on West and East campuses, and a part is carried on in a denominational building. The Methodist Student Fellowship meets in a beautiful new structure located midway between the two campuses, the Episcopal Student Fellowship is currently erecting a center adjoining the Methodist building, while the Westminster (Presbyterian) Fellowship is contemplating building.

All activities in the area of religious life are under the direction of the Chaplain to the University and the University Religious Council. Included in the membership of the council are the Presidents and the Advisers of all student religious organizations, elected student representatives from the schools and colleges, representatives from the faculty and administration, and members of the Religious Life Staff. The functions of this group provide guidance in spiritual achievement and encourage the student to develop creative, independent thought.

"Eruditio et Religio," the union of knowledge and religion, remains eternally complete so long as students may find the opportunity for continuing spiritual growth during the college years."

university religious council

PROFESSOR SCOTT GEHMAN,
Chairman of the University Religious Council

The University Religious Council is the student-faculty group whose concern is the total religious life of the University. Composed of persons who represent all schools, denominations and other groups on campus, the Council as a whole and through its committees fosters a varied and rich program of inter-denominational growth and service. Within its working machinery may be seen an excellent blending of student-faculty-administration effort to promote vital enterprise for the glory of God.

The chief service project of the Council is the operation of the Edgemont Community Center in East Durham. Overseas projects are carried out at the Japan International Christian University, at the Union Theological Seminary in Manila, and a foreign student scholarship program brings Christian students to Duke from other lands.

One of the most vital phases of the Council's work is the bringing to the campus of outstanding leaders of thought and action, for special observances in drama, theology, ethics, marriage problems, etc. Interfaith and fellowship projects, faculty religious life, and sending students to special conferences are only a few of the other interests of the Council.

The eight major religious groups on the Duke campus offer opportunities for students to worship in the church of their choice. A wide range of denominations is represented in the organizations, which include the Baptist Student Union, the Lutheran Student Association, the Canterbury Club, the Newman Club, the Presbyterian Westminster Fellowship, the Duke-Durham Unitarian Fellowship, and the Hillel Society. Their purpose is to equip students spiritually for college life. Throughout the year each maintains a program consisting of weekly meetings, study and discussion groups, speakers, intercollegiate conferences, and various social activities, as well as celebration of church rites. Interdenominational meetings and socials contribute a sense of spiritual unity between the groups. Students may seek advice concerning their problems from their religious chaplains and participate in the services of local churches. Weekend retreats in the fall and spring enable students to escape the stress of college living and establish a firm religious basis for his beliefs. The final aim of each religious group is to contribute to the development of finer character, higher service, and Christian citizenship.

The Independent Dormitory Council, as a political body, is the legislative branch of government for the non-fraternity men on campus. Its primary purpose is to foster a closer relationship between independents and to provide them with a well rounded social program throughout the year.

This year the Council, led by President Jim Poole, sponsored a Homecoming display, an intramural program, open houses after campus events, and other social activities, including several cabin parties. The Council contributed to the improvement of living facilities for independents, with the construction of a new lounge and the installation of several vending machines in the dormitories.

An integral part of the Council is the IDC Court, which is responsible for supervising the exercise of all powers regulating independent life. The Court tries cases involving infractions of both Administration and Council rules and may suggest amendments or additions to the Council's constitution. This judicial branch serves also in an advisory capacity to the Council and to the students.

PROFESSOR PAUL YOUNG
Director

Since the opening of the Chapel in 1933, the Duke University Chapel Choir has provided a large repertoire of sacred music for Sunday services and religious observances through each year. Under the direction of Doctor Paul Young, the choir has instilled in Chapel congregations a new sense of musical appreciation of choral music. Members of the group are given the opportunity to serve the Duke University community while they are gaining an awareness of noted sacred music.

In addition to forming an impressive and inspirational background for the regular Sunday services, the Choir gave special performances in the spring and at Christmas. Highlights of the year were the presentation of Handel's "Messiah" at Christmas and a noted oratorio in the spring, both of which traditionally receive much favorable praise from an enthusiastic audience.

Composed of 180 members selected from the Men's and Women's Glee Clubs, the Choir has become known far and wide for its outstanding musical quality and excellent direction.

The members of the Chapel Choir are: M. Brooks, O. Broome, F. Cody, L. Fell, J. Fowler, B. Friday, L. Funderburk, B. Gamble, C. Gaddis, A. Heidt, D. Holt, M. Jones, D. Knight, D. Latham, B. men's glee club

Working together under the direction of Professor Paul Young, the Men's Glee Club of Duke University strives to present to the public the finest in musical programs. The group was organized in 1927 by J. Foster Barnes. Throughout its history of thirty-two years at Duke the singers have cooperated to produce notable performances both on campus and on tour. In 1928, Northern Tours began as an important part of the scheduled activities, but not until 1951 was a Southern Tour added to the regular itinerary. The group achieved a measure of national fame by making a television debut on the "Perry Como Show" in 1958. Meeting for rehearsal two times each week, the group prepares a large repertoire of choral music for public presentation. Thus the Club has built up an extensive local and national prestige in its very successful tours and performances.

The 1958-59 season began in October with the presentation of a joint concert with the Women's Glee Club for Dad's Day. In a three-day tour of North Carolina, the group visited Charlotte, High Point, and Kannapolis during November. Between semesters, the Glee Club made its annual Northern Tour to Washington, D. C., New York, Pennsylvania and New Jersey. The Spring Concert was given in Page Auditorium in February.

During the spring holidays, the group completed the Southern Tour of South Carolina, Georgia, and Florida. In conclusion of the year's activities, the club provided music for the Commencement Exercises.

The membership of the Men's Glee Club consists of 165 men chosen in auditions conducted by the director. Interested singers may also participate in Chancel Singers, a small ensemble which performs at campus and civic events.

Members of the Men's Glee Club are: Andrews, Archibald, Baker, Ballowe, Bandre, Beasley, Bell, Bennett, C. Best, M. Best, Betts, Betty, M. Brooks, N. women's glee club

Under the capable direction of Professor Paul Young, the Women's Glee Club of Duke University has progressed in the last three years from the status of a training ground for the Chapel Choir to an independent group which complements the Men's Glee Club in choral activities. Approximately two hundred Women's College students are chosen for membership on the basis of auditions conducted at the beginning of each semester. There is also a waiting list of 40 women.

To prepare and present choral music of established value in the Duke community and on tour, and to represent Duke's musical achievements to the public is the doublefold purpose of the Women's Glee Club. In working toward these goals, the singers share a sense of cooperation, creativity, and mutual enjoyment of self expression as well as developing added poise in an ability to meet the public. With two rehearsals each week, the group is rapidly gaining recognition for the sensitive yet dynamic artistry with which it performs.

An integral part of the Women's Glee Club is the Chancel Singers, a group new on campus this year replacing the well-known Triple Trio. Thirty members are chosen by individual tryouts from the Glee Club. The select small ensemble performs at University functions and civic events in the Durham area.

In the 1958-59 season, the organization presented three major concerts, which included a joint concert with the Men's Glee Club for Dad's Day in October, a performance with the North Carolina Symphony, and the annual Spring Concert during Mother-Daughter weekend. Members of the club also provided music for the worship service at the Veterans' Hospital. In a three-day tour of North Carolina in February, the group gave a series of concerts in a number of colleges and cities.

Both the Men's and Women's Glee Clubs cooperate in sponsoring social events throughout the year. The highlights of these activities were an informal dance after the Dad's Day concert in October and a second dance in February.

The Duke University Symphony Orchestra presents its annual fall concert in Page Auditorium.

duke symphony orchestra

The 1958-1959 season found the Duke Symphony Orchestra at a record height in achieving "amateur music-making at a high level of artistic performance. Composed primarily of Duke students and faculty, the 75-piece organization includes several professional string players in its membership. Displaying genuine musical ability and finesse, notable performances from an extensive repertoire of classical music were Samuel Barber's Essay for Orchestra, No. I; Music for Strings and Dance for full orchestra by Quincy Porter, Milhaud, Johann Strauss, and Gentry-Mottl, and Shubert's Symphony No. 9 in C major.

Outstanding musicians from the Tri-City area combined with members from the orchestra in presenting a Little Symphony concert. The November concert featured a Woodwind quartet from the West Point Band which included two Duke music majors, Alumni William Lee, Bassoonist, Class '55, and Paul Cherry, Clarinetist, Class '56. The Quartet, completed by George Spence, Oboe, and Les French, French Horn, gave a sensitive reading of the Concertantes Quartett (K. 297b) by Mozart. In April, as part of Parents' Weekend, the orchestra was honored by the appearance of Gunnar Johansen, Pianist Artist in-Residence at the University of Wisconsin, in an exceptionally moving performance of the Brahms Piano Concerto No. II in B flat.

The outstanding concerts presented at various times during the year by the Duke University Concert Band were interesting and enjoyable to the University community as well as beneficial to the participating students. Membership, which is determined by an audition with the director, provides an outlet for the talents of qualified instrumental performers. The students perform fine musical literature of all styles and periods. The band had its beginning at Trinity College in 1923 under the direction of G. E. Leftwich. By 1929 the membership had increased from twenty to seventy, its present size. Robert B. Fearing and Allan Bone also served as directors prior to the appointment of Dr. Paul R. Bryan, present director. Last year the fall concert in the Duke Gardens initiated a series of enjoyable programs, which included a Dad's Day Concert in November followed by a winter concert in December. The band also gave a special performance for the high school band festival. In the spring, band members enjoyed a tour to cities in Western North Carolina. The concert in April, featured a special piano soloist, and was followed by a lawn concert in May. The year's activities were brought to a close by the annual commencement concert.

Since the Orange Bowl performance in 1958, the Duke University Marching Band, under the direction of Dr. Paul Bryan, has achieved widespread fame. Largely through its unusual half-time shows, the band has earned the reputation of being one of the wittiest, most spirited groups in the nation. The DUMB, as it is designated by the members, provides half-time crowds a high-stepping, fast-cadenced entertainment which goes beyond the ordinary band drill and formation making.

Dashing onto the Duke Stadium field beneath a puff of white smoke, the band this year depicted various aspects of campus living, including a humorous view of campus dating. Other performances off campus featured good-natured satire directed at such host schools as UNC and Notre Dame.

The band meets three times each week to organize, rehearse, and polish each drill, thus establishing a consistently high standard of performance. A small group of the members also form the Pep Band which plays for pep rallies.

Tim Strickland, Drum major and Paul R. Bryan prepare for half-time show.

BOB HUTCHINS
Director

The Duke Ambassadors have been hailed as the Nation's Best College Dance Band by such magazines as Down Beat and Metronome and have backed up this claim by successful engagements throughout the nation and at such places as Europe, Iceland, Bermuda, the Azores, Portugal, the Caribbean Area, Panama, and the Canal Zone. Performing at Army, Navy, and Air Force theaters and over Armed Forces television stations, the group last summer participated in the welfare and recreation program of the United States Army Caribbean in a two-week tour of Panama. On the Duke campus, the band annually plays for Orientation Week and during the Joe College Weekend. In addition to providing music for University social functions, the Ambassadors visit other campuses and appear at civic and state functions, including the North Carolina Governor's Ball and the Wilmington Azalea Festival.

Consisting of 15 musicians and a female vocalist, the Ambassadors represent the highest in "Name Band" achievements. Original arrangements done in a smooth danceable and listenable style highlight each appearance and demonstrate the tremendous versatility of the group. Evidence of the caliber of musicianship developed in this group is shown by the fact that it has in the past been a stepping stone for musicians to such professional name bands as Gene Krupa, Ray Anthony, Woody Herman, and the Glenn Miller Orchestra.

Mary Rh[illegible]ine, Secretary; Herbert Herring, Chairman

The Publications Board meets monthly to hear reports from the editors and business managers of campus publications and attempts to unify student editorial policies. The Board further serves to elect students to all salaried positions on publications and to regulate the salaries and the commercial advertisements of the Archive, CHANTICLEER, Chronicle, Peer, Playbill and DukEngineer.

Membership on the Board is divided into voting and non-voting members. Editors and business managers of the six student magazines, newspaper, and yearbook attend the meetings to report and discuss, but do not vote. Five representatives of the faculty and Administration, four from Trinity College, four from the Woman's College and two from the College of Engineering make up the voting body. Dean Herring is chairman of this year's Board.

The two monthly meetings held in March and April are set aside as election sessions to interview and vote for the new editors and salaried staff of the six publications. The last meeting of the year is joint for the old and new Boards.

AWARD POETRY

by MILLARD DUNN

What man can see so deep within his heart
To know himself in full; his feelings great,
His joy, his sorrow, yes, his hidden hate,
And pity him who only feels in part?
And who would brave to see his naked soul
And find instead of fancy pictures fair
A being free to breathe the purest air
And drink from life's sweet cup that's flowing full?
It's he who knows the biting sting of pain
That makes the gifts of life to us so dear,
And he shall drink the deepest draughts again
And feel upon his cheek the sweetest tear
Wrung from his heart by all that sorrow brings
Or flung out of the soul that joyous sings!

The swallows are playing in the tree limbs that stand in outline dark against a sky of dying coals; with just a glowing flame where, with the setting
sun they watch
The day
die.

A distant train whistle cries through the darkness mournfully. Ah longing . . . the longing so sweet, that whispers softly in the night, "Come home . . . ."

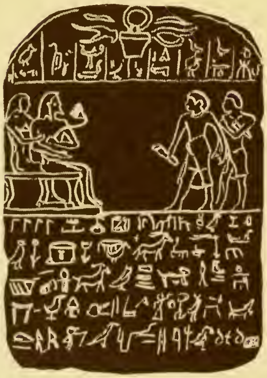
Ha, Jazzmen —
Play your songs;
Pour your souls into the haze
Of smoke filled rooms; live the daze
Wrought from wrongs!

Swing, Jazzmen —
Swing the tantalizing rhythm
Of sweat and smoke — beer hall rhythm.
Laugh at form —
Plunge in the depths, the whirl,
The maddening storm,
And laugh, laugh at the world!

THE DUKE PEER

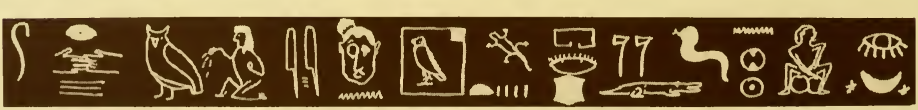
The peer dates back far beyond written records. Prehistoric man recorded, in pictographs, their attempts to better the situation in which they found themselves, what with pterodactyls and the frightful way they carried on. The recorder was known as the HGUPEEGHR, etymologically related to the modern word, PEER.

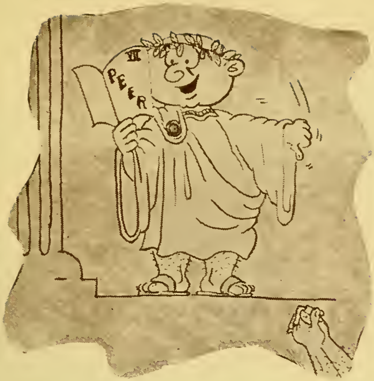


Focusing on the golden civilization of the Egyptians we have found ample evidence that such an organ as ours existed in the days of the Pharoahs. The strip of heiroglyphs shown in this story tells the status of a papyrus publication which went under the name "Pharoah," which as we all know, is etymologically related to the Modern English version: PEER.

The large scene, partially hieroglyphs and partially pictures, shows a members of the subscriptions staff of this magazine (note figure with scroll in hand) delivering the magazine to a member of the ancient University at Cairo. The subscriber is obviously pleased, for he is waving a lotus flower. (Note also his Egyptian maid.) The "Pharoah" flourished nicely during the eighth, or He'kka'nih dynasty. The Pharoahs of the day were a good group, and encouraged the publishers of the magazine. There are even records that they received a subsidy of papyrus leaves and lotus blooms.

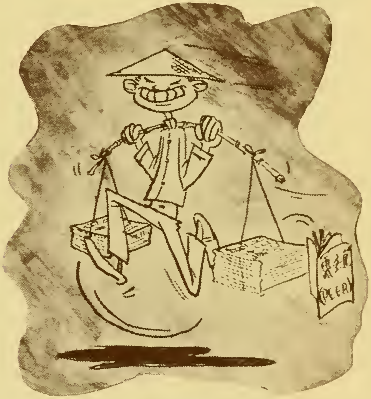
The tradition flourished.





The magazine added feature stories on the happenings of the day, and on customs and the like. The influence of the magazine could be felt in all parts of the world. Ancient Rome adopted the idea, and soon, by Imperial Decree, everyone was forced to subscribe to the magazine. During the decline of the Empire, the magazine, known as "Optimus Liber Featurorum" also degenerated into a political pamphlet, the only thing retained of note being the "Poesis Mensis," the girl of the month. This luscious beauty was chosen from the ranks of those licentious wenches who were part of the court.

Even in the Far East, in China, such a magazine as first outlined was an established institution. Coolies travelled far and wide, bearing huge stacks of copies to be distributed. Emperor Ch'un Hsung, of the Lao Dynasty, became incensed at such a thought: a magazine was no longer needed, he asserted, to point out flaws and discords, for there were no discords. His objections went unheeded, for the magazine was very popular. They were unheeded, that is, until he had all copies burned, and had the editors banished to the outer wastes.



the peer: other times, other places

Here we see one of the very first of a long line of "Peeresses of the Realm." This fine example of American girlhood is representative, to be sure, of the type of lovelies prevalent on college campuses in those golden days of yesteryear. This girl is shown in the typical sporting costume of the period, dressed for field hockey, and with her freshman bow in her raven hair.

Glee Club Concert Adequate But Falls Below Expectations

By STEVE HAMMER

Giving their first concert of the year last Friday the Men's and Women's Glee Clubs failed to live up to expectations but gave a performance well worth the attendance of the more than 1000 persons in the audience.

What probably dimmed the appreciation of the audience was the only average singing of the 140-voice women's group, which appeared before the highly-touted men. Lacking enthusiasm and "polish" the women were weak in their attacks, especially in "Ave Maria;" and their high notes (in "Kyrie," for example) were too airy. Neither was the harmony in their songs very evident, but this is a common problem with all women's vocal groups.

One distraction in their presentation was the constant body-weaving and fumbling of musical scores.

Most of these imperfections appeared to have been cansed by nervousness and over-trying, because the singing improved on the latter numbers, especially in "I'm So Glad Trouble Don't Last All Day," which was nearly perfect. In all of the women's numbers the words were very easily understood.

The men made a vast improvement on the women's performance and did justice to Paul Young's superb directing. Their attacks were sharp and forceful (both at high and low volume), their voices were filled with enthusiasm, each harmony part was clear, and yet they were disciplined so as to sound as one unified tone.

The only real weakness in the men's performance was the restraint in several instances ("Fill Every Glass") when the volume should have been ear-piercing At low volume, especially in "S That Babe in the Lowly M ger," the men had tremen breath support, and their could still be understood.

Mike Best was clearly the best of the soloists, but he also had the best material to work with. Many notes were just too low for Boyd Hight, so he wasn't always understood, and Ed Ballowe was a little too tense to give full justice to his fine voice.

The concert was a good demonstration of the fact that a good selection of songs will help greatly to bring out the best qualities in a vocal group. Too often, in this concert and others, the repertoire has been more appropriate for the Chapel Choir. When they sang "Shenandoah" and "Ride the Chariot," the men were everything a Glee Club is supposed to be, but in "Gloria" the voices were unexciting and lacked finesse. The same was true of the women in their three Brahms numbers.

In the future director Young should make a concerted effort to prevent the concerts from being too serious and classical.

Cops Get Plastered

Four University students engaged in the innocent pastime of snowballing Wash Duke at the East Campus Circle yesterday were offered a challenge by a cruising police car.

"We'll take you on," shouted the officers, as they piled out of the car brandishing snowballs threateningly.

After a brief but vigorous battle, the cops took shelter in their patrol car and hastened away, but not before a final glob of snow flew through its open window and splattered the guardians of law and order, keepers of the peace.

Myrtle Drive's white line is permanent this time, according to a City Hall spokesman.

Like many a campus-bound inebriate, the painters who first decorated Myrtle this summer "had trouble finding the middle of the road," said the official.

Myrtle Drive is University-owned, and the city painted the center line at the request of the Administration. The expense of both coats of paint was assumed by the city, but the disposition of further maintenance costs is yet to be decided.

The crooked line might have been easier to follow on Saturday nights.

Women Change Honor Code To 'Code of Campus Living'

No Longer Requires Reporting Others

By LIZ LENGYEL
Chronicle News Editor

A Code of Campus Living, a revised "honor code" drawn up by a joint WSGA and Judicial Board council, was passed by a clear majority at the Monday night WSGA meeting, after 45 minutes discussion.

Margaret Stennis, chairman of Judicial Board, presented the new code and pointed out the revisions.

The main difference from the old honor code is that a coed is no longer obliged to report the violations of another individual. More explanation of the code is given in the new form.

As a reason for the name change, Miss Stennis said that the new title was adopted in an effort to facilitate the passing of an academic honor code. So far, this project has been hampered by the association of favorable social rules with the words "honor code."

She also mentioned that t new proposal had not bee unanimously accepted by the council itself.

Connie Lucas, speaking not as a council member, began the discussion. She said that the new code was "not a basic or adequate change" and attacked it on the basis that it encourage a "double standard" of living. She asked for more emphasis on personal honor and less on corporate responsibility.

Other speakers defended the new code saying "it helps us to express to ourselves what we feel" and "was a move in the right direction."

After the meeting adjourned, Patsy Lee, WSGA president, said she was most "gratified by the discussion" and "intelligent opinions" voiced. Miss Stennis was also impressed by the "well-thought out opinions."

And the Rain Came

The semester is finally underway officially as that perennial Duke-goer, rain, baptized the 1958-59 academic year with 1.10 inches of drizzle yesterday.

The rain—as much a part of the week end picture as a cabin party, it seems—dripped intermittedly from 3:42 a.m. to 4:25 p.m.

A total of 4.49 inches of sogginess is expected during September with a comparatively dry October scheduled for 2.82.

If the past is prologue, it'll come as .705 inch per October week end.

Official Student Magazine of the College of Engineering
DUKE UNIVERSITY
DURHAM, NORTH CAROLINA

The Exciting Life of the DukEngineer

18 YEARS OF FRENZY

By BILL EDWARDS
Electrical Engineering
Class of '59

WITH this issue of the DUKENGINEER begins another year of frantic activity by the staff of the magazine. For 18 years the DUKENGINEER has been published by the students of the College of Engineering and for 18 years there has been ''much sweat'' to get a magazine out, worthy of the name ''DUKENGINEER.''

The First Dose of the DUKENGINEER was administered to the campus in May of 1940, when the College of Engineering was situated on East and the Engineers lived in Southgate. The DUKENGINEER was created to fill a need that is best described by the following quotation taken from that first mimeographed issue in 1940.

''The Engineering Council wishes to dedicate the first issue to the progress made in engineering at Duke University which led to the establishment of the College of Engineering. This publication is strictly a student venture, and as such it will act as a medium through which the students can keep in contact with the functions and activities of the various engineering organizations. It will also serve to promote greater interest and initiative in extra-curricular activities by giving recognition for work done in this field. Lastly it will tend to bring about a better relationship between the faculty and students.''

Thus began the exciting life of the DUKENGINEER. That first issue was, of course, mimeographed, and consisted of 18 pages of copy. The contents of the magazine were divided among the three departments of engineering—electrical, mechanical, and civil. News of the societies and departmental activities comprised most of the issue. The fact that the engineers lived on East Campus probably had something to do with the appearance in that first issue and in subsequent issues too, of a column or so dealing with the more enjoyable aspects of engineering life here at Duke. In essence these columns were gossip columns or scandal sheets. A few excerpts will illustrate the point. (Note names have been changed to protect the innocent.)

''. . . Kelly is still plugging away in Gloria's territory along with eight other guys . . . . at last Jones has let East Campus overcome his resistance . . . . Sixteen is a little young isn't it Evans? . . . . Uncle Ernie may follow the example set by some of the other young altered profs.''

Got the picture?

Back in those days the students and faculty were on rather good terms with each other, and a large amount of ribbing took place between the two, as may be gathered from this excerpt from the first DUKENGINEER.

Another Barrymore?

''While dozing through the faculty plays your star reporter was awakened from his slumber by an old familiar voice. Upon looking up, I could scarcely believe my senses. 'No, it couldn't be,' I kept telling myself. 'Surely, this must be a dream.' But truth will out, and there on the stage was none other than the illustrious Mr. Wesley Williams of ''Strength of Materials'' fame putting his best classroom acting into effect. Mr. Williams had the lead in a suave comedy of the lighter vein entitled Sham (or should there be an e after the m?), and was giving his best performance of the year in his characterization of the easy-going Charles. Those who didn't know him as we do marvelled at his ability to play such a part—but we know differently, don't we, class? Even the rest of the audience had its doubts before the play was finished wher

Red' nearly upset the well-known ‘applecart’ when he tarted taking ‘moments’ with his size twelves about the corner of the sofa. It's been rumored that our hero will make his next appearance in ‘East Lynne’ or ‘West Durham?’ Ah, well, here's hoping.''

The appearance and contents of the DukEngineer remained the same for several years until the February 1943 issue when for the first time a glossy, printed cover replaced the old stiff paper mimeographed cover. On the cover there appeared a photograph of Southgate the engineers ‘‘home away from home.’’ This was the first time a photograph had ever appeared in the magazine.

As a passing note it might be mentioned that the first joke page to appear in the DukEngineer was included in the February 1942 issue. The jokes were generally the same ones that the staff ‘‘borrows’’ now. For example:

> “O—what was the explosion of Si's farm?”
> “—He fed his chickens some ‘lay or bust’ feed and one of them was a rooster.”

, the same old stuff!

It also might be noted here that over in 1941, the CE's were intensely interested in one particular activity that still remains dear to their hearts. In the March 1941 issue of the DukEngineer appeared an article called ‘‘Sewer Construction.’’ With typical CE enthusiasm for that type of work the article began ‘‘For the past two summers I have been working in a sewer.’’

In April of 1943 a new DukEngineer appeared on the campus. The magazine was printed entirely on glossy paper and a few photographs were introduced in that issue. Someone had come up with sufficient funds to produce a 16 page issue that included four somewhat technical articles ranging from construction of the Chapel tower to underwater communications. This milestone in the history of the DukEngineer was best explained by the following editorial that appeared in the magazine.

‘‘Since the founding of this publication some four years ago, every news staff has been constantly faced with three major problems: lack of sufficient student interest; disadvantages of mimeographed copy, and incomplete recognition by the Publication's Board. Despite these major obstacles, the efforts of former men and the persistence of the present students who are endeavoring to prove the importance of such an Engineering publication.

‘‘The road to final perfection is a straight but long journey; yet the goal lies ahead in full view of all who will but pause and look. The journey is in your hands, Engineers. Shall we walk or shall we run?’’

Co-operation of the student body and an increased interest in the DukEngineer on the part of alumni engineers, and industry bore fruit, when in July of 1943 an illustrated DukEngineer with national advertising appeared. In that 24 page issue were 8 pages of advertising. Previously the magazine had to depend upon subscriptions and grants of money to finance its publications, but with the coming of advertising more money than ever before was available for use in publishing the magazine. Actually the growth of a magazine depends upon the amount of advertising it can get, and at the same time the amount of advertising depends upon the quality of the magazine and how much circulation it has. So we see a vicious circle exists, and growth must come gradually for such a publication as the DukEngineer.

From that July 1943 issue on to the present time the DukEngineer continued to mature and grow in size and quality. Some features were added and some were dropped in the DukEngineer, but by and large the magazine retained much of its original purpose, that of a student magazine dedicated to keeping the students informed on various activities in the College of Engineering and in the outside world of engineering endeavor.

During the war years the DukEngineer continually featured articles on the war effort and on related activities at the College of Engineering. When the V-12 program necessitated the removal of the engineers from Southgate the magazine was among the first to lament the departure from East.

Today the DukEngineer ranks among the best collegiate engineering publications in the U. S. (yes, we're bragging). The magazine is the only publication Duke campus that has been self-supporting for any appreciable period of time. Most of the money for publication comes from national advertising, with subscriptions being a vital second source of income. From those two major sources of money the issues of the DukEngineer are published at an average cost of $900.00 per issue.

Editorial and business policies are chiefly centered in the hands of the Editor and Business Manager, with a final word in the hands of the members of the Engineering Publications Advisory Council.

The entire staff of the magazine is composed of Engineering students, and all the work that goes into the publication of the DukEngineer (writing, layout, editing, placement of advertising, etc.) is carried out by this staff. The going gets rather rough at times and last minute completion of the magazine is always the expected result, but in the end the DukEngineer makes it appearance on campus four times a year.

This then is a rough sketch of the life of the DukEngineer that first started as a few mimeographed pages of news and views about the College of Engineering, but which with the help and indulgence of a receptive student body has grown into a rather good engineering magazine. It's still the property of you the students of this college, and in your hands lie its future.

With this in mind then, the staff extends to each o you an invitation to join them in their frenzy and b come an active part of the DukEngineer.

Fourscore and seven years ago nobody was lucky enough to advertise with the Playbill.

Everybody notices the Playbill's Advertising. You did!

The Playbill is the youngest of the Duke publications, but it is one that is based on a definite campus need. The aim of this year's Playbill has been to foresee the needs of the theater audiences at Duke who attend Artist Series, Duke Players performances, Hoof and Horn shows or any of the numerous other organizations served by the Playbill. The editors felt that all of these attractions could be enhanced by a publication that would set the mood of the performance by its cover art and by its comments. In view of this, the Playbill sought to produce a better magazine—from the front cover where attention was focused on better art and more attractive color formats and arrangements to the ads which were treated to a different layout in order to preserve the continuity of the program. Instead of pre-digested press comments, the Playbill did its own program notes and artistic biographies with an eye toward what the Duke audience wants to know.

The work of the CHANTICLEER staff is directed toward one purpose: to provide the Duke University community with an accurate and interesting record of campus life. Striving to capture with a measure of originality the many aspects of college living, the staff worked with the leadership of Editor Karil Newman and Business Manager Tom Irwin. The advice of Ralph Langreck, artist of the Benson Printing Company which published the CHANTICLEER this year for the first time and of Doris Leeper, representative of Southern Photo Process Copy Engravers aided the staff in producing a fine product.

The CHANTICLEER staff is composed chiefly of students interested in writing, photography, and business. For purposes of convenience, it is organized in two component divisions: editorial and business. Writing copy, planning layouts, and supervising photography, the editorial staff developed a graphic view, both pictorial and written, of Duke University. The actual tone of the campus was recaptured by including articles from major campus publications, reprinted on antique stock paper. A regular student office staff was instituted this year to handle typing and other clerical details. The business staff of the CHANTICLEER planned the overall budget and was responsible for the financial aspects of publishing the yearbook.

CRAIG CHOATE
Business Manager

The Duke Chronicle, the tower of campus thought and action, was founded on campus in 1904. It had been rated annually by the National Scholastic Press Association as one of the finest college newspapers in the country. One of its outstanding points is that it receives no administrative censoring. The Chronicle strives to graphically portray a continuous picture of the entire University, to be an instrument in bettering the University, and to increase student interest in University affairs.

For the first time in its history, The Chronicle is published three times a week. Students receive an eight-page edition each Wednesday and Friday and a four-page edition each Monday. Among other changes, the Chronicle office has been remodeled, and the staff now has its own engraving machine. A full scale subscription drive, also attempted by the staff for the first time, was highly successful this year.

Steve Hammer edits The Chronicle, and he is assisted by Belden Randolph, Coed Editor; Fred Andrews, Managing Editor; Craig Choate, Business Manager; and Sue Friend, Coed Business Manager. A sincere interest in journalism and a C average are the only requirements for staff membership. Finances and advertising are handled by the business staff. After an introductory session, conducted by the Coed Editor each fall, students may join the reporting staff.

The Archive, a student creative arts magazine, first received its charter in 1913 from the Library of Congress. It has since progressed from a newsletter, to a feature magazine, to its present form. The purpose of The Archive is to stimulate student interest in the fine arts and to encourage talented individuals to express their talent. The magazine, which is published four times a year, includes student art work, poetry, fiction, and essays.

In the spring, The Archive supported a student arts forum, sponsored by Dr. Blackman and others. This forum took the form of a fiction and poetry contest for students in all the neighboring colleges throughout the South. The prize-winning works were then discussed in forum style by famous persons, and The Archive devoted the last issue to the publication of these winning works. Polly Akin served as editor of The Archive this year. Membership in this publication, which is the oldest continuous literary publication in the South, is open to all those sincerely interested in the arts.

Written, edited, and managed by students, the Peer is the feature magazine of the Duke Campus. This fall marked the fifth year of publication for the Peer, which was instituted to give the University community a magazine with a wide range of interest and appeal; and its slogan has been, "A Magazine That Aims To Entertain." In accordance with this policy every article in the quarterly issues is assigned to staff writers or accepted from campus writers at large only if it can meet the strict criterion of student interest and appeal. An unlimited range of subjects appears in the form of feature stories, fiction, photographic essays, and cartoons. For this reason, those interested in writing, cartooning, photography, or participation in the more technical work of the editorial staff, have an unlimited field.

Of the four major publications at Duke, the Peer is the only one not subsidized by the University and is dependent entirely upon the sale of subscriptions for its campus revenue. Therefore it must maintain a large publicity and sales force prepared to sell the magazine by effective advertising methods: newspaper stories, posters, and personal contact between salesman and subscriber.

The magazine first began as a mimeographed newsletter to engineers in May, 1940. As a result of subsequent growth, it now combines both technical accuracy and high literary quality. The publication has been ranked as one of the outstanding college engineering magazines in the nation.

Published four times per year, the issues contain articles covering a wide range of interests, all the way from the subject of superconductivity and the hyperbolic paraboloidial shell to an article by Bill Edwards, entitled "Eighteen Years of Frenzy." Each engineering student may publish the results of his private research in his particular field and may also keep abreast of recent developments in related works by reading the informative information included in each copy of the DukEngineer.

Harold C. Byrd, professor of Civil Engineering, founded in 1933, the Student Chapter of the American Society of Civil Engineering on the Duke campus. The purpose of the organization is to help the student prepare himself for entry into the profession of Civil Engineering by stimulating early professional consciousness while he is still concerned with techniques. Membership in the ASCE is open to all Civil Engineering students, although the officers must have a "C" average. The president and vice-president of the organization are chosen from the senior class and the secretary-treasurer from the junior.

The society began its activities this year with a three-day field trip to Norfolk, Virginia. During the year other one-day field trips were made; social activities included a picnic and banquet. At the regular meetings, which were held on the first Tuesday of every month, guest speakers were featured who spoke on the various phases of engineering. A film viewing session was held each month.

The Duke Chapter of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers was established in 1927 under the sponsorship of Professor Walter J. Seeley. Its main objectives are to assist in the professional development of the student and to acquaint its members with both the practical and theoretical phases of electrical engineering. Members in the organization are provided with an opportunity to meet informally with their instructors, to listen to industrial experts from various fields of indusry and research, and to talk with other students about current ideas and problems.

A resume of the year's activities includes a field trip made by the 70 members to the Western Electric Research Laboratories at Winston-Salem, North Carolina. At the monthly meetings, the society heard a representative from the International Business Machines Corporation who discussed computers, and a speaker from the Naval Research Laboratories who explained Project Vanguard and modern space technology.

Coordinating the group's activities this year were President Chuck Yengst; Vice President Thomas Taylor; Treasurer Robert McFarland; and Secretary Thomas Gnuse.

The Duke Chapter of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers was formed with a dual purpose: to keep its members informed of the latest advancements in the theory and practice of mechanical engineering in general and to stimulate interest in mechanical projects within the school. The group pursues this policy with a variety of activities. Leading speakers in the fields of engineering are invited to the monthly meetings to discuss new developments in their areas. In November, the members made a four-day field trip, visiting the Army Missile Center at Huntsville, Alabama; the installations at Oak Ridge, Tennessee; and the Air Research Command at Tullahoma, Tennessee. A student representative of the society presented a technical paper at the convention in Gainesville, Georgia, in April.

The total membership of the society is approximately eighty, with membership open to all mechanical engineering students. The officers for this year were President Lee Bassett; Vice President Carroll Beaty; Recording Secretary Jim Temple; Corresponding Secretary Jo Wine; Treasurer Ray Goodson; and Student Government Representative Bob Gamble.

engineer's student council

The Engineer's Student Council is the chief governing body for the students of College of Engineering and plays a vital role in helping the faculty to solve problems that arise in the student body. In addition, the Council participates in the planning of various educational and social activities throughout the year. Among these are the sponsoring of the Engineers' Ball for students from the College of Engineering and their dates, work on the Homecoming displays, and operation of the student lounge. The Council is responsible for the staging of the annual Engineers' Show which features student displays and demonstrations of new developments in research and industry.

An auxiliary agent of the Council, the Engineers' Guidance Council, assists in advising the freshmen and cooperates in sponsoring an open house during Orientation Week.

engineer's guidance council

Completing its second full year of operation, the Engineers' Guidance Council functioned as an advisory group for freshmen enrolled in the College of Engineering. First established under the supervision of the Engineers' Student Council, the organization worked independently to help the new students in adjusting to the demands of their academic life and extra-curricular activities in the first semester of engineering.

To acquaint the freshmen with the activities included in the program, Chairman Jim Girard spoke at an open house during Orientation Week. The fifty members of the Council were assigned as tutors for the basic engineering courses: algebra, trigonometry, physics, and mechanical drawing. Additional preparation was provided by review sessions before each hour exam. Council members also advised freshmen concerning their personal problems and their role in engineering.

alpha phi omega

Alpha Phi Omega, now serving in its fifth year of growing activity at Duke University, is a national service fraternity whose purposes are to promote leadership and fellowship among its members, to gather college men into the spirit of the Scout Oath and Law, and to provide service for the students, the faculty, the community and its members, and the nation. Not directly a Scouting organization although closely connected with the general movement, the fraternity worked with the Boy Scouts of the surrounding area. In the fall, it sponsored a highly successful Foreign Graduate Student Orientation and Dinner and helped with the painting and the moving of the Southside Child Care Center. Throughout the year, the brothers worked at the Methodist Retirement Home, the Durham Children's Museum, and the Child Guidance Center, as well as helping at some of the Student Union presentations. Alpha Phi Omega, its approximately thirty members headed by Brian Thiessen, is the only purely service organization on the Duke Campus.

debating council

The purpose of the Intercollegiate Debate Council is to give as many students as possible an opportunity to develop proper speaking, argumentative, and thinking habits through participation in intercollegiate debate. The group has been organized for ten years on the Duke campus and meets weekly for practice. The Duke Council has represented the Southern Region for the last three years at the National Elimination Tournament held in West Point, New York. Last year members attended fourteen tournaments, participated in 169 debates, met seventy-nine different colleges and universities, and traveled over 10,000 miles. The climax of the year came when Duke's team of Carl Stevens and Alex Lacy won the Southern District Elimination Tournament and represented the region at the National Tournament. Presently the Debate council has forty members and is led by president Alex Lacy.

The Duke Pre-Medical Society was formally organized in March, 1957, by William Nesbitt, the society's first president. Since that time, the society has been a very active organization, constantly endeavoring to continue and expand its original aims and purpose.

The purpose of the Pre-Medical Society is to help the pre-medical student decide about his place in medicine and to supplement his preparation for a career in the medical profession.

As a part of the year's activities, members of the society went to the university hospital to observe surgery being performed. At the meetings, held on alternate Thursday nights at 8:00 P.M. the two hundred fifty members of the society were informed by a series of lectures given by department heads of the Duke Medical School. A blood-donor program was also carried out in cooperation with the Duke Hospital blood bank.

Heading the Duke Pre-Medical Society this year were President, Steve Boone; Vice President, Bob Durrett; Recording Secretary, Kay Riffle; Corresponding Secretary, Jack Peacock, and Treasurer, Mike Robison.

CHARLES THOMPSON
President of Bench and Bar

The Bench and Bar, a society which has been active for many years on the Duke campus, conducts meetings every two weeks. These meetings are designed to teach undergraduate pre-law students more about their future profession under the purpose of the society which is to give the pre-law student further insight into the legal profession and to present programs oriented around the various phases of the law. The society's 60 members have heard many speakers during the year with Dean Elvin R. Latty of the Duke Law School, Dr. J. Bradway, also of the Duke Law School, and a member of a New York law firm among them. Various mock trials, panel discussions, movies, and talks by judges and lawyers from Durham were also featured. The meetings, held every other Thursday night, were presided over by Charles A. Thompson, president. He was assisted by vice-president Wallace C. Harrelson, secretary, Rudolph Thunberg, and treasurer Bruce Kloppman. Dr. Bradway of the Law School has been the adviser for Bench and Bar for several years.

hoof 'n' horn

Hoof 'n' Horn, oldest musical comedy organization in the South, this year marks its twenty-third year on the Duke campus. Founded in 1936 by two undergraduates, Peter Callahan and Tom Mackie, the club was little more than an idea for the first four years of its existence. However, with the production of its first full length show, Say When, in 1940, the organization began a period of growth that has continued to the present day. The yearly or biannual shows have grown from sketchy one-man revues consisting of dances, songs, and no plot, to well written, well staged, full-length musical comedies. The club has been invited to present several of its productions for the alumni at graduation and has taken several other shows on tour throughout North Carolina. While the main effort of the club is the spring show, an integral part of the Joe College Weekend, the organization also participates in fall activities such as the Homecoming Show and does whatever it can to present musical comedy to the Duke University community.

To be eligible for membership in Hoof 'n' Horn, a student must work actively on some phase of the production of one show. An eight-member executive council, elected at a combined meeting and banquet in the spring, supervises the affairs of the club and selects the script, director, and producer for the annual show. One of the distinctive things about Hoof 'n' Horn is that it is a completely student-run organization; students write the show, compose all songs and music and handle all phases of the production, including backstage, business, singing, acting, dancing, publicity, and general production work.

This year's executive council, headed by president Linton Brooks, chose for the spring show Harry Pearson's An Evening With Sigmund Freud, a satire on student-administration relations. Set in the nineteen twenties, the show takes place at Ivy College, a small, typically American school. Unable to understand the students' refusal to conform to the "wist, just" rules of the college, the administration invites a noted psychiatrist to analyze the student body. When the students' refusal to conform to the "wise, just" rules of the college, the deans, with hilarious results. Skillfully woven into the plot is a love story of two of the students. Helped along by excellent music and acting, the show moves smoothly to its conclusion. An Evening With Sigmund Freud was produced by James Haney, a junior English major, and directed by club president Linton Brooks.

Duke Players, the drama organization of the Duke campus, is dedicated to the presentation of the finest in theater entertainment for the culture and enjoyment of the University community. It strives to foster an understanding of the educational and commercial drama.

The 1958-59 season began with the production of the comedy, "My Three Angels," in Page Auditorium. The audience laughed its way through the escapades of three convicts as they involved themselves in a desperate family situation. Continuing in a lighter vein, Duke Players presented in Branson "The Lady's Not For Burning," a comedy sparked with wit and witchcraft. The actors tried their more serious dramatic talents with "Hedda Gabler," a sociological interlude play, in Page Auditorium in the spring. In addition to the three major productions, Duke Players sponsored readings of "Twelfth Night" and other works plus student-directed laboratory productions of one-act plays.

An executive council headed by President Gary Tunmore led the organization in its activities. Any Duke student is eligible for membership when he has completed a total of 50 hours of work on two plays.

Throughout the year, the Athletic Association sponsors sports' tournaments. They also hold co-recreational nights once a week in the Woman's College Gym. W.A.A. participates both in sports days with other North Carolina colleges, and in the organization of Athletic and Recreation Federation for college women. Upperclassmen dormitory representatives, a freshman representative, and freshman dormitory representatives make up the membership of the W.A.A. Board. Aside from East Campus representatives, Hanes House has one member on the Board. Every student of the Woman's college is a member of W.A.A. Pat Hansen is president of W.A.A. for this year. Meetings are held every other Monday night at 8:00 P.M. in the Woman's College Gym.

nereidian club

The purpose of the Neridian Club is to promote interest and efficiency in rhythmic swimming, stunts, and diving among the women students of Duke University, who demonstrate their aquatic achievements in an annual water show at the end of each year. New members are chosen on the basis of try-outs early in October and the organization has a present membership of fifty girls. During weekly practices, the members work to perfect a smooth graceful style of swimming and to synchronize their strokes in precise rhythm. This year of practice and planning was culminated with the "Aqua Circus" in which various swimmers and divers performed numbers developed on a circus theme. The show was scheduled to be given again during Parent-Daughter Weekend later in the spring.

The group has been on campus for approximately ten years, and was first organized by a group of eight girls who drew up the Constitution, initiation plans, and requirements for membership. Besides developing a proficiency in the art of swimming, the members enjoy an opportunity for creative expression. Leading the group in its activities this year was President Nean Lott.

President, Cindy Edson, lost in a demonstration on the gym floor.

Terpsichorean, an auxiliary organization of the Women's Athletic Association, attempts to promote an interest in modern dance on the Duke Campus and to provide the Woman's College students with an opportunity to express themselves through the dance form. Members are chosen twice each year in tryouts which judge co-ordination, feeling for dance, and enthusiasm.

The group's activities include weekly practices, an annual concert, participation in the Spring Arts Festival at Greensboro, and occasional exchanges with similar organizations from other college compuses.

The highlight of each year's preparation and practice is the annual concert which was given in February in Page Auditorium for the first time. The program began with a collection of folk dances staged in a North Carolina mountain setting and was climaxed by a group rendition of "Study in State and Change," an original interpretation of man's reactions in a wide area of human situations.

Led by President Cindy Edson, the thirteen-member group reached a high level of dancing artistry while developing personal poise, gracefulness, and creative thought. The club offers its members an opportunity to study dance techniques and choreography, as well as giving them a chance for both recreation and expression.

Pegasus, an auxiliary organization of WAA is a riding club composed of experienced horsewomen from the Woman's College. Primarily the group strives to promote an enjoyment of riding and good horsemanship as well as mutual love and understanding of horses. New members are chosen in fall and spring tryouts graded by Pegasus members. The method of selection is a required point average based upon riding posture, seat, hands, control of horses, and general riding ability.

Sharing a common knowledge of good riding habits and the thrill of the outdoors, the group meets weekly to ride at Pine Knoll Stables under the direction of Mrs. Betty Brunson. The highlight of the year is the Spring Horse Show which is sponsored by the organization and judged by professional judges. This year the show featured a riding drill performed by Pegasus members, competitive divisions open also to horsewomen from the Duke riding class, and the presentation of an award trophy for the most superior display of horsemanship. President of Pegasus this year was Mimi Bennett.

Organized in 1948, the Shoe 'n' Slipper Club celebrated its tenth anniversary at the Shoe 'n' Slipper weekend in November. The primary purpose of this group is to bring "big name" bands to the Duke University campus for the dancing and listening pleasure of the students during the two big weekends which mark the high spots of the social season. Making every effort to please the taste of the Duke students, the organization chose Stan Kenton and Ralph Marterie to provide music for the autumn festivities. Approximately eleven hundred students purchased bids, shook the moth balls out of their evening clothes, and danced to the rhythm of everything from the cha-cha to the "bop."

In the spring, the group sponsored the Joe College weekend, which included a picnic, a parade, and East Campus dormitory displays, in addition to the regular dances on Friday and Saturday nights.

The guiding force of the Shoe 'n' Slipper Club was a forty-five member council which met on Thursday nights before and after the big weekends. President this year was Rolf Towe.

radio council

Faculty Advisor to WDBS

The Radio Council of Duke University was created in 1948 as the managing body of the Duke Broadcasting System. Representatives from both Administration and the student body cooperate in supervising, maintaining, and handling all broad governing powers of WDBS. Their duties include the formulation of general policies, election of officers, and approval of the budget.

The Council meets once a month to discuss any expenditures for the station and to keep all business running smoothly. This year sales hit an all time high for WDBS, and the engineering department successfully avoided any major mishaps. In April the new station manager for WDBS was chosen by the Council to serve for the coming broadcasting season. The activities for both the Radio Council and the Duke Broadcasting System were climaxed with the annual WDBS banquet in May.

The membership of the Radio Council is composed of three faculty advisors, the Dean of Men, the Dean of Women, five station managers, and a representative from MSCA. Both faculty and students discuss and vote on important WDBS matters.

Bringing the best in radio entertainment to the University community is the purpose of the Broadcasting System, known to its listeners by the call letters, WDBS. Now in the tenth year of operation, the station is ranked as one of the top radio systems on any college campus. Foundedd in 1949, its history covers a decade of progress, growth, and expansion. Reaching an audience of approximately 5,000 people, the transmitters produce a powerful, high fidelity quality of sound which is received both on East and West Campuses, in Hanes House, and in the Graduate Dormitory. Striving to prove that radio is indeed "bigger and better than ever," WDBS employs a staff of 70 people, in areas of production, engineering, public relations, and business, and now broadcasts for 18½ hours per day throughout the school year.

WDBS began the year's activities by holding an open house during Orientation Week to acquaint the freshmen with its operation and to allow interested students the opportunity to participate in the various phases of radio programing. The annual radiothon was again conducted and included the giving away of 15,000 cigarettes, as an added feature. Providing an excellent coverage of all Duke University sports events, WDBS kept the students informed of team progress with accurate play by play descriptions of important games both on and off campus. Amateur commentators were sent to cover each basketball and baseball game of the 1958-59 season. As a service to the University community, staff members were sent to broadcast special remote events of particular interest to the Duke campus. In routine operation, WDBS commentaries created an awareness of important campus issues and events while its music provided a suitable background for the students to study, relax, or just listen. During exams, special "studying" music was played throughout the day. The climax of the year's activities came in April with the 10th anniversary banquet honoring the WDBS staff and the Radio Council which serves as an advisory board for the radio operation.

Acting as the Board of Governors for WDBS is the Radio Council which is responsible for formulating general policies, approving the budget, supervising appropriations and expenditures, and electing the officers who operate the station. Through the Radio Council, WDBS is able to determine the programs which most appeal to the student. With this information, the staff members plan a broadcasting schedule designed to serve and to entertain the entire campus.

Headed by Station Manager Peter Kautz, WDBS is virtually self-supporting. Because of its high sales record, it is one of the few campus organizations which can give salaries to its officers. Thus staff members receive compensation for their efforts as well as practical experience.

"This is the new WDBS, the voice and choice of Duke, serving the entire University community."

pep board

Muriel Hendricks and Ty Heineken, Co-Chairmen

The basic purpose of the Pep Board is to channel the school spirit of each individual member of the student body into any and all possible aspects which will benefit the University and its teams. With this broad aim in mind, the Board spent a busy year of planning and organizing a variety of student activities.

During the football season, the Board functioned at its highest point of activity. By sponsoring a series of Pep rallies, beginning during Orientation Week, the Board aroused and maintained a wholesome school spirit within the student body. Various publicity devices, including posters, floaters, dormitory announcements, victory telegrams to the team, the Pep Band, and pregame stunts insured an enthusiastic response and kept team morale at a high peak. Card tricks performed during the half provided additional color at each home game. Traditionally sponsoring the symbolic Blue Devil, the Pep Board this year introduced a new figure, The Prophet, who mystically predicted a successful performance at each game. The highlight of the year was the bonfire preceding the Duke-UNC game.

During the remainder of the year, the Pep Board strove to stimulate an interest in other sports. Personal contact from dormitory and fraternity representatives served to create individual interest in the athletic program of Duke University. The success of this effort can best be demonstrated by the high attendance at various sports events both on and off campus.

The guiding force of the Pep Board is the Executive Council which consists of chairmen from both East and West Campus, a secretary, a treasurer, and the heads of various committees—house, publicity, card tricks, and pep rallies. Meeting regularly in Flowers Building, the Executive Council decided general policy, sponsored the election of cheerleaders, selected the Duke Blue Devil, and co-ordinated the efforts of each committee.

The planning of every event was followed by careful committee work, thus giving a division of labor and insuring careful attention to details. The work of the Pep Rally committee was supplemented by the functions of House and Publicity powers and was considered finished only when the last card trick had been performed.

By keeping in touch with similar groups on other campuses, the Board was able to promote good sportsmanship throughout the area. This valuable service smoothed the way for continued participation in all intercollegiate sports and signified the real purpose of the Duke Pep Board, to create a bond of student loyalty and fair play through the encouragement of wholesome athletics in schools throughout the country.

The only requirement for membership on Pep Board is an active interest in promoting school spirit. Cheerleaders, the Blue Devil, and The Prophet are all under the supervision of the Board and serve as ex officio members. The present membership total is approximately 100 students from both East and West campus. Each contributes a valuable part toward creating, maintaining, and increasing the spirit and enthusiasm of all Duke students.

The Duke University Air Force Reserve Officers Training Corps was organized in July 1949. Expanding in size from the original class of forty-four cadets to a strength of more than six hundred shortly after the beginning of the Korean conflict, the unit consistently maintained a high degree of quality and prestige.

The unit has decreased in size in recent years to approximately 125. Today the Corps is a select, compact unit—producing officers that the Air Force and Duke University can be proud of.

The mission of the Air Force ROTC Program is to prepare students through a plan of instruction at civilian educational institutions to help fulfill the officer needs of the United State Air Force, both in the regular and reserve components. In addition, it aids in discharging any institutional obligations to offer instruction in military training. The AFROTC program at Duke consists of two years of training as basic cadets, with two academic hours of credit per semester.

Each week a Leadership Training Lab is held, during which basic cadets are instructed in the fundamentals of discipline and military customs and courtesies. Advanced cadets are familiarized with the functions and responsibilities of command positions.

Extra-curricular activities in which the AFROTC cadet may engage while at Duke are varied and numerous. There is an extra-curricular activity to suit almost any aptitude or amount of free time. The cadet who exhibits interest and enthusiasm through superior performance on the drill field and in the classroom soon finds himself in a position of leadership in the Corps. Although active duty Air Force officers and non-commissioned officers are assigned to supervise and instruct, it is the cadets themselves who plan and administer all unit activities.

The Precision Drill Team and the Drum and Bugle Corps offer membership to any cadet who is experienced or interested in these fields. These organizations perform not only at parades and reviews, but also in competition with similar groups from other institutions in this area.

Duke is fortunate in having one of the few MARS amateur radio stations in the United States. The station has a training program and is available to any cadet who wishes to participate. MARS is the only means by which ham radio operators can continue their hobby at Duke.

The Rifle Team is also open to any cadet, and matches with teams from other universities are scheduled.

The Photo Lab has some of the most up-to-date photographic equipment on campus, and is available to all cadets interested in this field.

Other additional activities in which the cadet may participate are the Annual Military Ball, unit parties, orientation flying, field trips to Air Force Bases throughout the coun-

Duke can justly be proud of the record of its AFROTC graduates, while on active duty with the United States Air Force.

The 1958-1959 school year has been a busy and interesting one for the Cadets of the Duke AFROTC. Many projects were undertaken; many goals reached. Ten issues of the "Contact," the AFROTC newspaper, were printed, the last issue being dedicated to the graduating Senior Cadets.

This year field trips were taken to Turner Air Force Base, Albany, Georgia; Shaw Air Force Base, Sumter, South Carolina; and to Seymore Johnson Air Force Base, Goldsboro, North Carolina. During these trips several lucky cadets were given rides in Jet aircraft.

The Cadet Corps turned out in mass for the annual Military Ball held this year at the Durham Elks Club. Miss Sally Forte reigned as Air Force ROTC queen.

For the past two years the Duke AFROTC Drill Team has won the Crack-Drill award at a tri-school competition among the Air Force ROTC Detachments of Duke University, the University of North Carolina, and North Carolina State College; and this year, in the role of Defending Champion for the second straight year, the Drill Team plans to capture the award again.

naval rotc

To supply the Fleet with a steady flow of well-trained Naval and Marine Corps officers, the Naval Reserve Officers Training Corps is established at fifty-two colleges and universities across the country. As a Midshipman in the NROTC a student receives training in every field of responsibility of a junior officer as he pursues his chosen major.

In the classroom, the Midshipman receives training at the hands of officers who are qualified as instructors by the University, as well as being line officers in the Navy or Marine Corps. He is taught junior officers leadership responsibilities, the customs and traditions of the Navy, basic seamanship, and the sciences of gunnery, navigation and steam engineering. Two weekly drills develop the teamwork, discipline, and esprit de corps so necessary to a competent officer. Indoor labs promote a high level of technical proficiency necessary for a capable leader. On Cruise during the summers, the Midshipmen have the opportunity to put to use the knowledge gained in classroom, labs, drills and extra-curricular activities, as well as to gain practical experience in the Fleet. These cruises also broaden the outlook of the student and show him his responsibilities as an American, civilian or military, in the world today.

Included within the NROTC program at Duke are the Battalions' crack drill team, which has carried off many honors in recent years; the nation's first NROTC marching band; a rifle team, which was third in the nation last year; and the DUKE DOLPHIN, undisputed leader of unit newspapers in the nation. These activities provide the Midshipman with an opportunity to gain knowledge of the Navy over and above his required courses, as well as to win acclaim both for the Unit and the University.

Established primarily to prepare college and university students as officers in the United States Marine Corps, Beta Charge of the Semper Fidelis Society is made up of officers, reserves, former Marines, and those students who plan future careers in the Marine Corps. The objectives of the society are to create a better understanding of the future responsibilities, traditions, and ideals of the Corps through informative lectures, movies, and discussions, and to promote good fellowship among its members.

Commandant Ken Cornwell and Faculty Adviser Major D. D. Ezell led the Society through a successful year. In accordance with the tradition throughout the Marine Corps birthday in full ceremony. At the Spring Banquet the future Marines heard Colonel Geremy North, RA, Ret., tell of his combat experiences in the German conquest of Norway. The society met numerous times for informal parties and get-togethers.

No matter what the activity may be, the underlying motive is always clear-cut—to develop the individual team-spirited Marine. These men know that the road to commissioning is an extremely difficult one—one that includes severe mental and physical hardships which are designed to make the individual a leader who demands respect from all men. Other services appeal to lesser virtues and ideals, but just as many Marine Recruiting posters say, "It's the man that counts."

FRATERNITIES—the word alone generally brings to mind memories of dances, cabin parties, dates, and fun. But the word "fraternities" means much more than that. For one thing, it also includes those Greek letter organizations belonging to the girls on East—sororities. Then, too, it includes rush, scholarship, leadership, work, fun, and friendship.

In the fall, as students return to campus and old or new friends, they also return to sorority and fraternity living. On West, the guys check to see how many "gave" away their pins to their best girl—on East, the girls sing to those among them who are now wearing a fraternal pin other than the symbol of their sisterhood.

On East, in the fall, the girls muster their forces for one of the biggest events in the sorority year—RUSH. "Recs" are reviewed and parties are planned; someone must order the correct refreshments at the right time; matching outfits are taken out of moth-balls and spruced up for concentrated days of social activity; chapter rooms are cleaned from top to bottom; scrap books are brought up to date; trophies are polished, and finally everything is ready to greet the rushees. Somehow, the Greeks keep smiling, as they attempt to keep up in studies, entertain the seemingly millions who are going through rush, and rub liniment on their knees—battered by nights of kneeling before rushees. And before long—a whole new batch of pledges begin training to be "active" sisters. During this time on West, the guys are having a "light" rush season for upperclassmen who want to pledge a fraternity. But their time to shine is in the Spring, as formal rush begins. Somehow the fraternities, too, live through rush with all its "chow-trains", open houses, sore hands, more open houses, parties, and social whirl, and find themselves with new pledges to polish shoes, run errands, wash cars, and pull pledge "sneaks" on the brothers.

In the fall is another activity of Greek letter groups—the Fraternity-Sorority sing, sponsored by Student Union. Many hours of preparation go into this event, as on East and West programs are selected, arranged, and practiced for hours on end. After the first sing—when all groups perform, a selection is made of a few fraternities and sororities who are to compete for the prize trophies on the next night. Another honor to add to that trophy case!

Throughout the year, the Greeks socialize among their own groups and with each other, as various groups have swaps, or joint cabin-parties. Then too, the guys on West have active social chairmen who plan combo dances, fall picnics, the inevitable cabin parties, formal dances, and beach parties.

Yes, the word "Fraternity" means a lot of things.

pan-hellenic council

All sorority members belong to the Panhellenic Association which is governed by the Panhellenic Council. Each sorority elects two members to serve on this council. The association works toward maintaining a high standard for fraternity life, and serves as a link between the College Administration and the fraternities. The use of chapter rooms in Panhellenic House, Mordecai House and Faculty Apartments is under the supervision of the Council.

The compiling and enforcing of rules governing rush, pledging, and initiation is the council's largest activity. Besides conducting rush, the council supports an Italian war orphan, and established a scholarship fund for a needy and outstanding student who is not necessarily a sorority girl. Panhellenic Workshop, inter-Fraternity-Sorority Sing, and Greek Week are some of the other projects of the Council. Each semester the Council awards a trophy to the sorority with the highest overall scholastic average.

Two projects this year were the help in reorganizing Sigma Kappa Sorority, and the "house" fund in anticipation of a new building or sorority court.

Alpha Chi's returned to Duke to be met by the whir of the rush wheel, as well as Hurricane Helene. At the center of activity were Margaret, our President, and Sally, Rush Chairman. After a busy week climaxed by our Dream Cake Party, we welcomed a wonderful class of twenty girls.

The pace slackened only a little, as an active fall got underway. Outstanding were the retreat in Duke Forest with a talk by Alpha Chi Dean Carmichael of Carolina, the pledge banquet at the Carolina Inn, the sleepless slumber party in the gym, the funny costumes at our pledges' Halloween party, the Thanksgiving party with the Sigma Nu's at the Cerebral Palsy Hospital, and the rewarding project of entertaining Durham teen-age CP patients every Tuesday. January's dreariness was counteracted by an exam party, and February's highlight was the never-to-be-forgotten pledge dance with its swish of white formals, nosegays of red carnations, and gay music.

The Alpha Chi whirl also encompassed campus activities with Phil and Ginger as President and Vice-President of the "Y," Allison, Co-Editor of the Archive, FAC's Sally and June, Judi-Rep Annie, Sandals Leah and Annette, and Phi Beta's Becky, Margaret, and Ginger.

May brought the senior banquet, and reminded us how much we would miss the class of '59—Connie's rendition of "Ugly," Marsha's knitting, Becky and her inevitable 4.0000 average . . . but a beach party after exams started plans for another successful year.

This fall the ADPi's began their activities with "rush." When rush was over and bids received, the actives were joined by nineteen new pledges and an affiliate member, Babs Berry. Suddenly, it was Homecoming and the ADPi's were honored by having Elaine Herndon and Betsy Day, chosen as candidates for Homecoming queen. A Halloween party proved a delightful break from studies. After Halloween came the Fraternity-Sorority Sing practices and participation in the finals. Active and pledge meetings, and occasional coffees, a pizza party, and Sunday breakfasts were enjoyed.

On Saturdays during the year, groups of sisters worked with the children at the Cerebral Palsy Hospital. Social Activities followed social work as the girls enjoyed many dances and parties. In November, there was a pledge swap with the PIKA's from Carolina. Ruthie Metts, Gail Bryan, Elaine Herndon, and Betsy Day selected for the CHANTICLEER beauty court, were presented at the Co-Ed Ball.

December provided opportunities to share Christmas with the children from Wright's Refuge and Edgemont, as the ADPi's joined the Duke Phi Delts and KA's. The carolling with the Pi Kap's, and the sister's own Christmas party filled the weeks before Christmas with gaiety and excitement.

An annual event, the Pledge Dance, was a social highlight in February. Spring means, among other things, Joe College Weekend, and the ADPi's got down to work to decorate a float for the parade. Exam time and a wonderful beach weekend followed by a farewell to the seniors finished another successful year of sisterhood and fun for the ADPi's.

Judy Reinach, Secretary, Betsy Goldman, Social Chairman and Cookie Anspach, President.

This fall, when rush was over, Alpha Epsilon Phi found that she had captured the hearts of seven freshmen, who joined the ranks as pledges.

Spurred on and excited by having been presented with the Pan-Hellenic scholarship cup at the first assembly of the Woman's College, the AEPhi's settled down to hard work, fun, and good eating. A Party complete with plenty of pizza pie was the first social event of the sorority after rush. In October the girls gathered again to enjoy gourmets' delight at a banquet held in honor of Founder's Day.

An annual event, the Alpha Epsilon Phi Pledge Dance, and a hilarious slumber party were two spots on the social calendar. Then the pledge class sponsored a social service project.

The spirit of the chapter this year was very high, and the girls agreed that they enjoyed every function and every get-together of the year, whether for the newly-instituted discussion group meetings, for parties with boys from other schools, dinner together at the Ivy Room, or just for hen-parties with the girls in the chapter room.

The pledge class was also very active this year. In addition to their social service project, the pledges gave a special party for the actives and also a party for members of the pledge classes of other sororities on campus.

Getting back into the social whirl after exams was the pledge dance and spring picnics Between their social events, the AEPhi's found time for meetings, and plenty of studying.

Under the able leadership of Cookie Anspach, president, the sisters enjoyed another year in AEPhi.

The Phi's returned in September looking forward to another successful year. We were proud of the girls representing us in various activities on the campus: Marlene, our president and Chairman of Campus Chest; Susie, treasurer of the Senior Class; Louise, FAC; Nancy, TAC; and Sue, holder of a gold "D" for scholarship.

After rush we were very happy to welcome a wonderful group of girls as our new pledge class. The social calendar began with a pizza party and a pledge paddle party in honor of the pledges. The fun continued with our Annual Founder's Day Banquet followed by a Halloween party at which the big and little sisters entertained us with skits. The pledges and their big sisters got together again for a party at the Rathskellar, and then just before Thanksgiving we had an informal get together in the room at which time we prepared a Thanksgiving basket for a needy family. Christmas fun included caroling at the VA Hospital, a party at the home of our chapter advisor, and a party with a fraternity on West for needy children. We brought the Christmas season to a close by exchanging gifts and trimming a tree in the room.

Spring found us enjoying our pledge-dinner dance as well as initiation banquet. Our activities also included cabin parties, retreats, cook-outs, and working on the Joe College float. We brought another memorable year for Beta Nu of Alpha Phi to a close by bidding the seniors fare-well at a party in their honor and an after-exams party at Myrtle Beach.

The year 1958-1959 was an active one for Delta Delta Delta. Rush turned out to be the busiest time of all and of course the most rewarding. The results were more than enough to make those 6:30 A.M. meetings seem worth while. The fall months were highlighted by the Fraternity-Sorority Sing in which we placed in the finals with our rendition of "Railroad Songs." The Founder's Day Celebration with the Tri-Delt chapter at U.N.C., and an apple-polish party for our professors added to the social calendar. We entertained the Pi Phi's and the Kappas at a wiener roast in Duke park. The pledge dance at the Hope Valley Country Club was the high-water mark for the year's social events.

Many Alpha Omicrons were in the limelight of campus activities: Polly did herself proud as Editor of the Archive; Jean was treasurer of WSGA; Betty was treasurer of the sophomore class; Mary Lynn and Finney were house presidents; Debbie, Kay, and Marion were FAC's. Our alumnae chapter also had an active year. They were a great help to us during rush and entertained the pledges and actives with a tea in honor of the pledges.

The Tri-delt's annual project is the scholarship given each year to a girl on East campus. We worked hard for a style show and bake sale with the profits going toward the scholarship. The Joe College Float was our main project in the spring—lots of work but even more fun. The chapter room stayed filled with the smell of pizza, and our listening-in parties kept the wires hot all year. The pledges gave a party for the actives at which time their pledge project was presented, and on a little less festive occasion—the Pansy Breakfast—we said good-bye to our seniors and to a satisfying year.

The girls of Beta Theta returned last fall to spend many fun and work filled hours on rush. Shortly after followed a Sundae party for the whole chapter where everyone made her own concoctions. Halloween was celebrated with a dinner party at the Rathskeller in Chapel Hill. Then came many fun-filled practices for the Sorority-Fraternity Sing.

The Christmas season was a busy one with the chapter giving a party for the Durham blind in connection with the national Delta Gamma philanthropic project of sight conservation. Also the sisters went to see the "Star of Bethlehem" at the planetarium in Chapel Hill and then dined at the Rathskeller at the annual Christmas party.

A very busy second semester was launched with the Pledge Dinner and Dance in Raleigh. Initiation followed the next day. In March, Founder's Day was celebrated with a luncheon at the Carolina Inn with the Durham-Chapel Hill Alumnae Association and the Raleigh Alumnae Chapter. As Joe College Weekend drew near, the girls worked many hours on the float for the big parade. Then, right after exams, many of the sisters gathered at Myrtle Beach to forget the worries and care of studies and enjoy the sun and surf.

All year long, the girls worked diligently at the Scent Garden at Camp Butner, a rehabilitation center for the blind, on the flower bed which the chapter purchased last year.

Just before exams started, a senior banquet was held to say farewell to the graduating sisters, wish them smooth sailing in the years ahead, and look back on another wonderful year with Beta Theta of Delta Gamma at Duke University.

The Theta kite flew higher than ever this year with President Gregory leading the way. Returning from a summer of multivarious activities, Theta was pleasantly confronted with a new and lovelier chapter room. No sooner were the Sisters settled than Rush '59 began. Under the patient and enthusiastic guidance of Muffy and Margie, we survived . . . to get twenty outstanding pledges. Cabin parties were most successful, with original and spontaneous entertainment topping off the evenings of fun. The pledges initiated a week of suspense with Secret Pals (?) haunting the dorms doing good deeds. With the approach of the Christmas season, the Thetas joined forces with the SAE's for a gala party at Wright's Refuge. Before the long-awaited vacation began, the sorority Christmas party was held, with the traditional reading of original poetry as the highlight of the night. In February, final arrangements were happily made for initiation and, at last, the Triad. Spring brought more coffees and cabin parties, and of course, the Joe College float . . . more chicken wire, paint, and laughs.

But Theta's year brought more than just fun. Scholastic and campus honors were bestowed upon Margaret Louise, Cindy, Carol, Cynnie, and Joanie. Also Theta beauty, Pat, was among those nominated for Dixie Classic Queen, while both Thyra and Karen made the pages of the Peer. And finally, three cheers to Nancy for the outstanding job done through Pan-Hel.

And all good things come to a close. Beta Rho concluded another good year with a picinc honoring the June grads. Theta shall miss each one of them—But all will look back, and remember with a smile, ". . . so ring out three cheers for Theta . . ."

The year started off with a bang for the Sigma Delta chapter of Kappa Delta as our rush chairman Bettie Brinkley and our Pika dream girl president Frankie Beaman led the KD's on to win 19 fine pledges. When the pledges received their bids, they were welcomed by their new sisters with a coke party in the chapter room. The new pledges received their big sisters and began collecting points. The group took part in the Sorority Sing and had hours of fun preparing for it. Many other get-togethers such as bridge parties, coffees and floating table suppers were held during the year. A party with the ATO's and Pika's at U.N.C. was planned for our pledges. Founder's Day was observed with the traditional steak dinner at Hartman's. Kappa Delta pledges had a thrilling moment when they were presented in beautiful white gowns at their formal pledge dance—a real night to remember! Spring meant Mother and Daughter Tea in the room, which was a wonderful chance to show off our chapter room. Much enthusiasm went into the building of a float for the eagerly awaited Joe College Weekend There were many occasions during the year for fun and fellowship. To end this gay social whirl, the KD's looked forward to the beach parties in the spring.

In our campus Hall of Fame were included Battle Rankin, who was in White Duchy and also served as Senior Class President; Chairman of Rush Advisors, Penny Martin· FAC's Carolyn Crosz, Winnie Satterfield, and Julie Wemberg; Judi Reps, Dava Cashwell, Sara Hunter, Terry Glidewell; and Gilbert House president Ann Bowden.

It was truly another wonderful year for KD! There were many times of fun and each new pledge learned the meaning of being in a truly close friendship.

The enthusiastic Kappas began their scrapbook with ideas from National Convention held at Bedford Springs, Pa. in the summer. An exciting year began with Sue Hancock's reign over Homecoming, and did not end until the last good-bye at the spring beach party. Twenty eager pledges entertained their sisters with a variety of talent and fun at a surprise party. Duke Kappas were both thrilled and honored to pin their keys on the charter members of U.N.C.'s new Kappa chapter. A fall picnic and occasional suppers at the Rathskeller helped us to get acquainted with our new sisters.

With the ATO's we entertained the Edgemont children at our Thanksgiving party in the Ark. A pre-Christmas cabin party was enjoyed by the Kappas and their dates. Christmas also meant a spaghetti supper around a Durham Alum's fireplace, and caroling at the Methodist Retirement Home.

It was not just a social life for the Kappas as they were represented in all phases of campus life. Molly, Claudia, and Joan were House Presidents. Mac, Sue, Patty, and Betty were chairmen of FAC's, Transfer Advisors, Foreign Students, and Coordinate Board. There were three White Duchy and four Phi Beta Kappas. Class, Judicial Board, WSGA, and "Y" offices were also filled by us.

In February we joined the Pi Phis and Thetas for the Golden Triad pledge dance. In the spring everyone worked hard for another winning Joe College float. There was also the thrill of initiation, and a breakfast in the room to introduce the Mothers to our sisters. As we wished the seniors good luck at the May banquet another scrapbook was finished with a year filled with fun, learning, and friendship in Kappa Kappa Gamma.

"Gung-Ho" was the name of it and "Gung-Ho" it was—the very first party of the Phi Mus in 1958, that is. After a very successful rush, we filled the "Well of Dreams" with 22 new pledges.

We took time out from our practices for the Sorority-Fraternity sing to entertain several alums at a Sunday afternoon tea. The Halloween party over, we donned costumes again, this time for a jungle party complete with "jungle juice" and chocolate-covered ants. The many harmonizing sessions for the sing paid off when we were selected to be one of the four sorority finalists. A dessert for the KD's, and then before we knew it, the busy Thanksgiving and Christmas seasons were here, highlighted with social service projects. One of our objectives this fall was setting up a big-and-little-sister program with Durham area alums, and our "little sisters" joined us in making stuffed animals which we gave to the children's ward of Lincoln Hospital. The presentation of our pledges at our Carnation Ball, at the Carolina Inn, welcomed in the new year. Spring and its excitement brought with it a house party in Winston-Salem. Founder's Day activities were enjoyed by alums and actives alike. Then came the time for artistic achievement—the Joe College float competition.

This year Phi Mu sister Karil served capably as editor of the CHANTICLEER, Donna Kay as a house president, Mary as an FAC, and Norb and Anna in Student Union.

At last a wonderful year under our president, Judy Staley, came to a happy close. After a tearful goodbye to our seniors, we left, eager for the fun-filled summer, but looking foward to next year.

Over the summer, the girls of the golden arrow occupied themselves with many diverse activities—working at home, living experimentally in Europe, hitching rides to our 1958 convention in Swampscott, Massachusetts. Then how happy we were to come back to school and to launch into another exciting year of being together.

Rush came and went before we could catch our breath, and we happily welcomed 18 new Pi Phi's at a banquet in the Old Trinity Room, the following week. Many fraternities wished us good luck with beautiful flowers we will never forget.

Our fall social calendar filled up quickly; the Tri-Delts gave the Pi Phis and Kappas a cook-out at the Duke Park, where we all ended up singing favorite sorority and fraternity songs. Early in November, the big sisters gave their little sisters a surprise party.

Near Christmas we again got together with the Betas for a party at the section. The party was given for Edgemont. Also at Edgemont, we gave a Christmas party with the ZBT's.

Spring semester was equally full of fun and togetherness. We presented our pledges at the annual Golden Triad in February and held initiation for them soon afterward.

Time has a way of taking wings in the springtime, as we soon found ourselves in Ft. Lauderdale for another week away from school. When we returned home from our week in paradise, we began thinking of how we were going to capture that Joe College float trophy again.

The year seemed to slip by too fast—especially for the Pi Phi seniors. But, no matter which class we were in, we'll never forget 1958-1959 as a year of togetherness in all our activities and we'll always hope for many more like it to come.

Led by President Di Ways the Sigma Kappas greeted autumn days on Duke Campus with enthusiasm for classes, parties, and rush. In November a delayed rush gained the largest pledge class in recent years for the Alpha Psi chapter. First semester plans included pledging in Duke Gardens, pizza and spaghetti parties in Pan Hel, informal coffees with other sororities, and fraternity swaps. The holiday season featured both service projects and social activities. At Thanksgiving, the Sigmas helped prepare food baskets for needy families. Christmas festivities were highlighted by a joint party with Delta Upsilon fraternity—followed by caroling at the VA hospital.

Second semester and the advent of spring found the Sigma Kappas engrossed in Greek Week, fraternity pledge swaps, initiation, more pledging, the pledge dance in April, informal get-togethers, pizza at Anna Maria's, and a slumber party in the gym. Following installation of a new advisory board, the main project was obtaining national approval for redecorating the chapter room. When April rolled around, the Sigmas tried their artistic talents with chicken wire, paper, and paintbrush—their creation, a massive float for the Joe College parade. Spring picnics and a bike trip to Duke Forest preceeded exams. Climaxing with that "Sigma Kappa Pep," the pledges and actives left Duke, only to meet again in June for the beach weekend.

As the Zetas made their eager way back to Duke in September, they were still reminiscing about the wonderful, fun-filled "last fling" they had enjoyed at Myrtle Beach the previous spring. But the main thought in all their minds was rush, with its parties and excitement. They worked hurriedly to prepare for rush, and after a very successful week of it, the girls felt free to relax. Soon actives and pledges alike were enjoying a delightful pledge banquet. Then came song practices for the Fraternity-Sorority Sing. To climax this busy fall season, the Zetas held a cabin party, complete with a combo. With the approach of the holidays, socializing bowed to social work as helping at the VA Hospital received the attention of the girls. When exam time reared its ugly head the Zetas buckled down "en masse" to studying. February brought with it hours of preparation for a dinner-dance in honor of all the pledges. Then it was time for the Joe College parade and the Zetas busily prepared their float. Planning for the Senior Banquet and another week at Myrtle Beach followed close behind. With farewells to graduating sisters, the Zetas concluded another exciting year.

Many Zetas were active in campus activities this year. Three girls served on the Student Union Board of Governors. Zeta also claimed the Secretary of WSGA, the chairman of Judicial Board, the president of Sandals, and a member of the White Duchy. Individually and as a group, the Zetas had a very successful season.

Summer breezes had spread the Duke Taus far and wide—to Europe, Alaska, and even to Myrtle Beach. With the coming of September the wearers of the Maltese Cross returned once more to the campus, and the bonds of brotherhood were again renewed and strengthened.

Gone were the legends of Bino, Gig, Ol' Dee, and the rest, but new legends were soon to arise in the intellectual infallibility of Best, the romantic exploits of "Charlie Brown" Warren and the new ultra-conservative attitude of Pinhead.

In September and October the Y-FAC boys got dates for their freshmen —by November the frosh were doing the fixing up. "Poor Judge" Casey passed the infamous $40 Coke out the back window, and to make matters worse we didn't even get our bottle back.

Homecoming saw the ATO"s drowning Baylor Bears in Dook-a-Poo Tau Juice—until Dr. Swinkley's pulleys and ropes broke down when the judges came. Football games with their inevitable open houses, Smith's Lake, and the Tar Heel Club—familiar places—and the creation of happy memories of another fall semester.

In December, we redecorated the C.R.; "Warburton's Folly" turned out to the satisfaction of the whole group in spite of dire predictions to the contrary. The big snow cost us thirty-three window panes and brought down the wrath of Skip on the entire freshman class.

February brought rush, and another fine pledge class found a home in Ol' House C. Tweed and Paulson provided us with a topnotch spring social program, culminating in the Joe College festivities and the annual beach affair.

1958-59 has been a year not to be soon forgotten in the memories of the Duke Taus.

"Deans put Beta Theta Pi on suspended suspension" greeted the Brothers of Beta Theta Pi shortly after their return to Duke's Gothic campus in the fall. Despite this severe warning from the Administration, Beta continued to . . . The highlights of the fall semester were the infamous Birthday party, the Juniors upsetting the Seniors 13-12 in the annual Jr.-Sr. football game, Homecoming Weekend, and the annual Christmas party, with the Tri-Delts and the faculty as our guests. For the Grits, Santa Claus brought snow . . . nine inches of it; for the rest, it was sledding at Hope Valley, also courtesy of Saint Nick's white deluge.

Following mid-year exams and a hectic Rushing period early in the Spring semester, the Brothers settled down to their usually hectic life. Inspection of campus extra-curricular activities found the Brothers firmly established in the Shoe n Slipper Club, WDBS, the Chronicle, the CHANTICLEER, Judicial Board, and Joe College Steering Committee. In the field of varsity sports, many Betas won their letter on the lacrosse, golf, swimming, wrestling, tennis and track teams.

The outstanding social event of the Spring semester was the Spring formal at which time Dr. Taraba was honored for his services to the chapter and the Beta Sweethearts were presented. Other highlights were the various rock parties, Beach Weekend, Joe College, et cetera, et cetera. Under the effective leadership of Henry Rouse, the year for the Betas was shwonderful, even with that shushpended shushpenshion—yahoo!

In 1958, the Delta Sigs returned to Duke to find themselves in the midst of a period of great transition. Under the leadership of President Roger Knapp, old DS forged ahead as never before, producing both physical change and re-evaluation of purpose. Fall semester, as a first move in this direction, the old chapter room and card room were completely renovated and enlarged to better than twice their former size. As a finishing touch a new electric sign was purchased for the front of the section. In these surroundings we entertained Alumni and guests for Homecoming Weekend with a round of social functions beginning with a lawn barbecue and ending with a cabin party. The Brothers, under the direction of Brother "Cecil B." Whitsett, constructed what was in many ways the most colossal Homecoming display ever —but for the sake of a broken drive shaft. In the midst of all this hard work the Delta Sigs still found time for a round of pre-game barbecues, cabin parties, beer parties, and to top off the fall season our state-wide Carnation Ball was held in Charlotte. Brothers and dates went caroling at Watts and McPherson Hospitals, and—oh yes, Cox got married. I.F.C. President Brother Yengst was our BMOC for the year.

Our rush program was climaxed by a Pledge Banquet at the Saddle Club and the Black and White Pledge Dance in March. The remainder of the semester was given to a round of cabin parties and other functions. In May another highly successful year for Delta Sigma Phi was brought to a close with our traditional Sailors' Ball and Beach Party.

As usual, the school year of 1958-1959 brought much activity and enjoyment to the Delts. Prominent in all areas of campus life, this year saw brothers Hammer, Van Hettinga, and Smith hold the leading positions in The Chronicle, Peer, and Engineering Student Council respectively . The social activities, the forte of the Delts, were "swinging affairs" as always. They included weekly parties at brother Odom's home, numerous cabin parties, the annual Hanes House open house, the never-to-be-forgotten Wannamaker Ball, and a fabulous weekend at Myrtle Beach. Through the journalistic efforts of Brother Greene, the intramural activities were posted on the bulletin board in the "Daily Delt." Placing in the finals of the Fraternity-Sorority Sing to the tune of 'Dry Bones,' and "Go Down Moses," the Delts showed the fine spirit which characterizes all their activities. At Homecoming, with the help of the engineers and other sidewalk superintendents, a gigantic church was erected in memory of the Baylor Baptist Bears. Preparing for Spring and on-coming Rush, we put the finishing touches on our beautiful new section, installing the newest thing in stereophonic sound. This was a major threat to Slater and his TV Club as it interfered with American Bandstand. At Rush our numbers were swelled with an outstanding group of pledges. The year was climaxed with the Delta Tau Delta 100th Anniversary Weekend and the Rainbow Ball when Pat Turner passed the Delt Queen Crown on to the next lucky girl. In retrospect, the Delts can look back on another year full of achievement and good times.

That "long, long time from May to September" never seemed so short, but the brothers of Kappa Alpha managed to assemble once more on the Methodist Flats and prepare for another good year of varied activities and gay festivities that make up another episode in the life of our boy, Joe, of college fame.

Football weekends brought excitement, pretty girls, parties and disappointment. As in the past, KA was well represented on the Blue Devil roster with particular recognition going to Wray "The Train" Carlton and Mike "Tiger" McGee, who both made All-State, All-Conference and All-American selections.

The Gladiolas gave us "wild music" at a joint party with the Phi Delts, while "Johnnie" put us in the nostalgic mood that makes Christmas holidays a time for rejoicing.

Second semester and spring brought sunshine, Eno parties, romance and other essentials that supplement scholastic endeavor. KA pledged another outstanding group of gentlemen to carry the fratrehood in the footsteps of Robert E. Lee.

"Scotch and Soda" with the Kingston Trio was a boon! Nichols and "Joe" made those "happy hours" unforgettable. And Charlotte again opened her heart and "stores" to us and made the "Old South Ball" the social highlight of the year.

The cycle is complete. Good men are leaving to make their mark in the ledger of success, but able replacements stand ready and anxious to perpetuate Kappa Alpha traditions. The college years drift slowly into the annals of history, but the memories remain.

September brought the Kappa Sigs back to Durham, but not for long . . . Bags remained packed as the brothers spent the first two weekends at South Carolina and Virginia, following the Blue Devils. Throughout the Fall, brothers looked forward to the Saturday games, the Open Houses, and the Cabin Parties. Open Houses honored alumni, Kappa Sig pin-ups, and parents. Also on the social calendar, was the "Hood Party" and Christmas party. During Shoe 'n' Slipper weekend, Jo Anne McLawhorn was crowned Kappa Sigma Dream Girl at a dinner party given in honor of the ten Dream Girl candidates. The Christmas Season was ushered in with the annual snow battle with the Freshmen, and the Christmas party with the KD's for the children from Edgemont.

Throughout the year, Kappa Sig athletes displayed their talents on the varsity football, soccer, basketball, baseball, lacross, and track teams, as well as in all intramural competition. Annamaria's "Pizza Team" deserves special recognition for their successful season.

Memories of the '58-'59 year in BB include . . . the usual pinnings (and unpinnings!) . . . the addition of the Ugly Man trophy to our trophy case . . . the third floor bridge games . . . the improved Chapter Room and Card Room . . . the exchange of Christmas gifts (?) . . . and the many all-night bull sessions. With Spring came the usual rush functions, the pledge class, their raids on the section. Weekends were spent fording the Eno, traveling to and from Myrtle Beach, and playing golf at the "Pitch and Putt" Course. The parties during Joe College and the Black and White Weekend were the highlights of the Spring social events.

June brought the end of finals, graduation for many, and a close of another successful Kappa Sig year.

The days of September saw the Lambda's Chi's returning to campus. Our Y-FAC men led the way followed by the brotherhood. The dust settled, Homecoming was here and LXA built one of the best displays on campus. Playing bridge twenty-four hours a day paid off when the Campus Bridge trophy came to the chapter room. "Tom Dooley" led the brothers to victory in the Fraternity-Sorority Sing. The Zeta's and Lambda Chi's got together to toast each others success. Some of the brothers became PBK's, ODK's, and members of other honoraries. The football team became division champions with a record of being unbeaten and unscored upon. The fraternity fought through the drifts of an "unheard of" December snow to have the Winter Formal at the Willowhaven Country Club. The fall semester ended with the Lambda' Chi's and KD's aiding two needy families at Christmas and caroling at the VA Hospital.

February came and with it rush. The fraternity emerged with a group of outstanding young men as pledges. Cabin parties filled the schedule until spring vacation when the brothers headed for points South. With warmer weather, the parties moved outdoors. Saturday afternoons at Hogan's Lake and Umstead. Joe College Weekend came with its parties and its float. Lambda Chi built one it could truly be proud of. The climax of the social year came with the Spring Formal and the crowning of the Crescent Girl. Shortly before exams the brothers and their dates made the journey to Myrtle Beach to end another year that had seen LXA meet success on every front.

Under the leadership of Jack Smith and his entourage of coeds, the Phis swung into another year—striving to better their third place academic positions among fraternities; socially with George Beverly's veteran guidance, and the Doug "Hot Nuts" Clark Combo; and supplying talented leadership on most of the varsity teams.

Bob Torray directed the M.S.G.A. from his perch on the third floor, being ably assisted by Fred Grover who served in the capacity of secretary of that organization. Tom Calhoun added more laurels to his record. Bill Bond and Wilson Farrell were among the "cutest" boys on the Campus, while Big John settled down to more serious adventures with a beauty queen. One of our brothers went off the deep end—right, Mr. Scuderi? More remarkable perhaps is George McCammon—he finally had a date.

The Gladiolas enlightened our social calendar when they played at a very successful party hosted by the Phis and the KA's. More fraternities should try this sort of thing! The ADΠ's were very helpful, as they came to our aid when we entertained the children from Wright's Refuge at our annual Christmas party.

Big John and Bubbles Burr extended their tenure of duty at the University; we had the best second-place Homecoming display in the University's history; George Beverly moved to greener pastures at U.N.C. after exhausting his supply at Duke; Bruce Soule was elected to lead us during the second semester; and Herb Reese conducted us through another successful rush season.

phi kappa psi

Under the leadership of President Bill Kloman, North Carolina Alpha of Phi Kappa Psi once again drained the maximum of potentiality out of Duke life in the 1958-59 theoretically Academic Year.

Starting the year with a do-it-yourself reconstruction of Chapter and social rooms (it wasn't planned that way—the maintenance department simply neglected to help), the Brothers saw their work and were well pleased. The Fall Informal at the Raleigh Country Club, a surprisingly successful on-campus party, assorted cabin parties, open houses, and an impromptu sledding party on the Duke Golf Course kept Phi Psi's own conception of Social Standards up to par.

Throughout all a stable and better-than-average academic position was held: a liberal sprinkling of Brothers were tapped into academic honoraries or found places on the Dean's Team.

Phi Psi entered intramurals enthusiastically and came out with a highly respectable record. Phi Psi also contributed membership and leadership to Student Union, WDBS, The Chronicle, Duke Players, Hoof 'n' Horn, the Duke Band , the Men's Glee Club, etc., etc. 1958-59 also saw the initiation of the Chapter's new alumni newspaper.

Spring rush, trips to Myrtle Beach, Bailey's, Fort Lauderdale, the Saddle Club, and Havana, Joe College Weekend, the always enjoyable exam period, and a rash of graduation parties—brought the year to the traditional "End."

That sounds like the end of a story, but for two-thirds of the Brothers, who will be returning, another year of the same will pass before once more is heard the ancient call of the shepherd: "You know you can't park here."

The Skull 'n' Bones were exhumed as Phi Kaps reinvaded the "animal quad" looking forward to another year of parties, parlay sheets, and progress. The brothers again established themselves on varsity baseball, basketball, tennis and soccer teams, and in the offices of MSGA, Student Union, the Chronicle, the Judicial Board, and the "Y." And, as always, Phi Kap had its share of red carnations, ODK and Phi Bete keys, and "Who Dat's." Never forgetting that Phi Kap's primary objective was to make the grind bearable, we highlighted the Fall social program with "Black and Gold" at Hope Valley and a Marine Corps birthday party (blast?). Contrary to tradition, the brothers constructed a half-decent homecoming display and Joe College float, and placed a strong second in the Fraternity-Sorority Sing. The Phi Kap football team failed to win top laurels, but did manage to win its share as usual. With the passing of Christmas, we set our minds on Rusing and bolstered the ranks with a good crew of future Phi Kaps.

Events not to be forgotten, of course, were . . . Domhoff's Kent State newsletters . . . the Byrdmen and the Suckarounds . . . "complete control" Ruben . . . hockey on the third floor . . . pi kappa alpha

"The playboys and gymrats" of Pi Kappa Alpha returned to Duke in the Fall of '58 after a brief respite from summer school determined to reach that higher plane of intellectualism that always seems to elude us. Leading the returning scholars was, of course, Gordy, now working on his master's in TV, Phi Beta Vanderbeek became a closet case in Chapel Hill while Benny cut the cheese for the little wild Mouser. The nightly worship services in Sear's and Block's room were well attended by the junior Brothers. Bertch and Marth brought their hair remover and applied it nightly, while McMillan ate baby food for his ulcer. Askin and Fisher led the Pika's in intramurals, equipped with flashy red jerseys, while Bjontigard kept the fires burning at Bailey's Robison copped the safe driver's award and Linton, the greyhound, made tracks to East every night. Booher bought weights to strengthen his frail body for track season, and Dumpy silently looked on. Radeker led our rowdy group second semester following a semester under Bertch. Kautz and Duvall handled the "tower of power" and helped brighten those early morning awakenings. We had no rain for homecoming and snow for our "Snow Ball"—and color television. What kind of year was it? It was a year like all years, filled with fun and unforgettable friendships, a year of Pi Kappa Alpha, 1958-1959.

September, 1958, and the Brothers of Pi Kappa Phi came roaring back to Duke from Yellowstone, Florida, and the beach to the first full year in a new section with the biggest chapter room on campus. With football season in full swing, cabin parties and open houses dominated our social program for the Fall semester, a program whose high point was the 1958 Rose Ball and the crowning of Rose, Darl'ene Thomas. Intramurals brought more football, and the Pi Kap sophomore dominated team, while dropping only one 0-to-6 loss, piled up a total point record of 117 to 6 against all opponents. Homecoming brought more open houses and cabin parties as the Pi Kaps celebrated winning the first prize award for the Homecoming display.

Spring semester brought a hectic but highly successful rush period. Pledge training highlighted this semester along with the Beaux Arts Ball, the Pledge Dance and the Myrtle Beach party. And who'll forget a thousand scenes of section life: Nee prowling around at 2:00 in the morning as we try to study in the chapter room; hi-fi's at full blast in every room; the Pi Kap Riviera on the roof; Archon Fred Brownson pounding the gavel for order after Possum's social committee report; Bevis and the Fraternity Sing; serenades and pin-ups; John Bruton and his jokes and Viceroys; overcuts; "tight times"; pledge trips; and bridge games with beer stained cards.

Added up, these big and little things have made this a year worth remembering for Pi Kappa Phi.

sigma alpha epsilon

After diversified summer activities, the brothers of Sigma Alpha Epsilon initiated their fall endeavours under the stimulating leadership of Lawrence W. Bennett. With pronounced initiative and perseverence, SAE successfully maintained her proud esteem and prowess under the guidance of Minerva's staff and Leo II's virtuous masculinity.

The Fall Semester was characterized by the exercising of the traditional norms of Sigma Alpha Epsilon—the annual ZBT/SAE Beer Bowl Game, the entertainment provided for the benefit of the Edgemont children at several Blue Devil football games, and the usual chaotic atmosphere of the open houses following the athletic events on Saturday afternoons. Shortly thereafter, the fraternity's cooperative efforts were motivated toward the annual Christmas Dance, renowned for its congenial, social environment manifesting the spirited unity of the Sons of Minerva. Being second to none in establishing precedent, Sigma Alpha Epsilon founded its daily "communal" dinners at the Saddle Club in a successful attempt to envelop the bonds which have remained stabilized for over a century.

With the arrival of second semester, SAE demonstrated its unyielding favoritism to De Voties fraternal descendants with its recently acquired pledge class. Imported and instructed in the traditional virtues and attributes of so profitable an organization, the pledge class greatly contributed to the laudable activity within the confines of the Lion's Den. With so noble an attitude, the components of Sigma Alpha Epsilon completed another successful and enjoyable academic year—only in anticipation of returning in September to abide by the virtuous dictates under Leo II's provident eye.

Following the leadership of president John Pless, the Sigs carried through another successful year. A new event appeared on the roster this year in the form of pre-football game "cookouts" in front of the section. Other fall activities included the annual Sweetheart Banquet in honor of Sweetheart Julie Campbell. Late in the fall the Sigs played host at a Christmas party held for some of Durham's underprivileged children, with Santa's knee to sit on and presents for all.

The spotlight of the year's social flings was focused on our Sweetheart Dance, held at the Carolina Inn, Chapel Hill, N.C., where Paula Straw was crowned our new sweetheart. The biggest event in any Sigma Chi social Calendar, it will long be remembered as one of the most enjoyable weekends ever spent while at Duke.

In the intramural field, the Sigs aimed at retiring the High Point Trophy. An unscored-on football team, and many Sigs tying down individual sport titles pushed the Chapter toward this goal.

Athletically, the Sigs were well represented in Varsity sports, especially football with Sigs holding both Co-Captain positions. Also in basketball, wrestling, track, lacrosse, and baseball lineups Sigs were present. Down Campus, Sigs could be found in class offices, publications, debate council, honoraries, NROTC, AFROTC, WDBS, and Student Union.

Scholastically the Chapter worked toward retaining the National Fraternity improvement trophy which was won here last year.

The Chapter was hit, however, by the accidental deaths of two proud possessors of the White Cross, Joseph Temple Shackford, Trinity, and Joseph Edward Stayskal, College of Engineering. Both were Juniors and Chapter regrets deeply the passing of these two fine men to the Chapter Eternal.

sigma phi epsilon

With the coming of September, the brothers of Sigma Phi Epsilon returned to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of the chapter at Duke. Under the capable leadership of Charlie Scott, the new year was met with anticipation of things to come.

Most of the year is already locked up in memories. We can look back and recall the Indian summer weather of the football season . . . the games, some heartbreaking, and the open houses, section parties and outings which followed them . . . the hearts club, and later the poker club carrying on into the wee hours of the morning . . . the casino party and, especially vivid in our memories, the Christmas dance and the after-hours refreshments provided by Brew . . . the wave of pinnings which swept over the brotherhood . . . sweating hourlies and, too soon, finals . . . and another semester ends.

Spring came, and spirit reached a new high for the year. A chapter sweetheart was chosen, adding to the glory of the Sig Ep heart. The big formals came, first Joe College and soon after, the Sig Ep Ball. Each was welcomed and enjoyed by the entire brotherhood. Beach parties were liberally interspersed with afternoons at the Eno, and the annual Charlie's Day outing climaxed the social calendar. As the semester passed through the daily routine of exams, poker club meetings, term papers, and bull sessions, the ties of brotherhood were bound and strengthened between old brother and new.

Another year ends, we get older and wiser . . . already thinking of next year. "See you 'round the quad."

tau epsilon phi

Having consistently ranked number one in scholastic achievement, the brothers of Tau Epsilon Phi continued to maintain the highest fraternity average throughout this year. While we regard scholastic excellence of prime importance, it is by no means the only area of TEP proficiency.

This year we have substantially increased our social program. We best remember our fall semester for our Gala Homecoming Affair, which was the best on-campus TEP weekend in a number of years. Cabin parties, open houses and the like were present in their usual abundance. Comes the spring and our minds wander away from the books and toward such places as beaches, golf courses and more cabin parties.

Fall and Winter sports hold even more importance. Despite many handicaps, the TEP intramural athletic teams turned in noteworthy performances. We point with pride to our football team, which, although at time outmanned, was never outplayed. Led by the superior quarterbacking of Mike Korotkin, the team always posed a potent threat and set many new passing records. Once again the basketball team maintained high ranking in its division. We also fared well in individual sports, capturing the singles handball championship of the University.

The TEP's participated in a great number of extra-curricular activities. We were very active in campus politics, holding important class offices and party positions. Top posts were held in dramatic, publication and religious groups, to mention but a few of the areas of active interest. Our annual Christmas party for underprivileged children highlighted our program of philanthropic endeavors.

Joel Glazer, President and Phil Wetzler, Vice-president.

Under the capable leadership of Joel Glaser, Zeta Beta Tau enjoyed its best Fall in several seasons with its largest membership in many years. With ranks swelling to almost fifty brothers, the "ZBT's" ranged from afternoons at Rinaldi's to dinner at the Ranch House, and to Scandia Village in Raleigh for our Homecoming Dinner-Dance, a high point in a fast and furious social season, including a Playboy Party and a Christmas Party with the Pi Phis. The Schmata Rhythm Boys rocked and rolled at Hartman's Lake, and the new chapter-room "will be finished by next week, for sure—but where are the drapes?"

The ZBT Tigers looked awfully good for awhile in annual intramural competition and received post-season invitations to the Nose and Beer Bowls. The basketball season looked even better. The varsity Duke baseball squad has three ZBT starters, as does the lacrosse team; also some wrestlers and fish, in and out of the water.

ZBT was quite active in the Student Senate, IFC, Playbill, Peer, Pep Board, Shoe and Slipper and many other well-known campus organizations. We also sponsored the UMOC contest and topped the school in recess and free cuts.

With the arrival of Spring, ZBT gained new life with a fine pledge class and, after Spring Vacation and a wild Joe College, finished off the year with a May Affair Beach Weekend to end all beach weekends. So closed another year of success for Zeta Beta Tau amid the great gothic enclosures.

The Interfraternity Council, composed of members of the nineteen fraterities on campus, urges cooperation instead of competition with the result of a mutual benefit for all. The main aim of the Council is to create an awareness of the deeper, more serious aspects of fraternity life. Starting the Fall semester with the annual Interfraternity-Sorority Sing, the Council then began work on Rush and Greek Week. Rush was shortened by one week and was reorganized to make it beneficial to both freshmen and fraternities. The aim of Greek Week is to bring fraternities together on a worthwhile project, and plans were made to include a Chapel service, track meet, dinner and dance. Cooperation and smooth harmony were strived for between administration, independents, and fraternity men of the campus. Activities of the FIC included sponsoring a foreign orphan, publication of a fraternity handbook, participation in Homecoming Weekend, and the promotion of fraternity-sorority exchange parties. Acting as the center of the legislative, executive, and judicial powers of the fraternities, the Council served as a coordinate body among the organizations.

WHAT ATHLETICS MEAN TO THE UNIVERSITY

ATHLETICS dramatizes competition and trains young men for a part in a competitive force—the free enterprise system. It teaches to participants, to other students and to the public the necessity for total education by admitting that in addition to a brain to be trained, a student has a physical body and emotion which must go along with intellectual development.

In athletics a man learns to think under fire, to make decisions under pressure, to work harmoniously with others; he does for the team what he wouldn't do for himself alone.

Athletics emphasizes the value of the will-to-win, a necessary quality in any aspect of life.

By fostering athletics, the university becomes the most effective exhibitor of sportsmanship by keeping it before the people, and in particular, providing a fine example for high school and pre-college youth.

Sports in college is a part of the life of self-improvement for the individual. One of its duties is to enhance the integrity of the individual, which is the core of American greatness.

To alumni and friends of the university, athletics is the most powerful rallying force and greatest developer of spirit, and an invaluable instrument of public relations. At most colleges, the proceeds from athletics finance the sports and physical training program for all students.

There are higher degrees of happiness in some things other than sport, but I think happiness is found most readily in sport, and more predictably—by plan—than in almost anything one does. Effort in sport is a matter of character rather than reward. A learned man once said: "A person's greatest moment of happiness is to be tested beyond what he thought might be his breaking point—and not fail."

Sport is the moral equivalent of war, having all the virtues and none of the vices of war. It is the physical epitome of life at its best, as philosophy and science are its intellectual epitome.

Competitive athletics is the hair on the university's chest. It gives a masculine accent. It is the one thing left that co-eds can't get into and do better than the men.

Smiling Bill Murray had a so-called building year developing some fine prospects for the next year. But in the making, he pulled fine effort from his team on numerous occasions. Quite often we see the spectators sit back and ask, "Why, Murray, why?" But, more often than not, we see the Blue Devils trugging up and down the field. Behind the football team scenes, Duke has some of the best personnel in the nation. Eddie Cameron serves as Athletic Director and is on the Board of Directors of U. S. Olympic Association, Inc. It is he who is responsible for the top-notch opposition. Since he became Athletic Director at Duke in 1951, Duke has played an average of two games a season with later bowl contenders. Carl James is Assistant Athletic Director and one of the best recruiters in this section of the country. He is always interested in the boys and any future prospects. Ted Mann is considered the Dean of athletic publicity. He has been associated with Duke since 1927. "Red" Lewis is General Business Manager and basically in charge of ticket sales and distribution.

Murray has a very capable coaching staff and among them is Doug "Little Dumpy" Knotts who did a very creditable job in handling the defensive linemen. Having lost 6 of 1957's starting linemen, he had to work primarily with inexperienced boys. It was not long, however, till the Big Blue forewall showed its spunk in many enthralled defensive stands. This was also Doug's first year at coaching.

Here is an analysis of last year's team by position. At Ends, Bert Lattimore and Doug Padgett did a good job throughout the season, but will be lost by graduation as will Jim Bartal, who came on very strong at the end of the season to play some standout ball.

Bumgarner, and that fine offensive standout, T. Moorman. New additions that should give needed depth to carry on the Lonesome end are Merm Johnson back from a stretch in the service, Dan Gilbert, and Bob Garison. Tackles Don Denne, hustling Jim Gardner, and Jim Swofford lose only big John Kersey from their key position. Dave Bosson and Marvin Musselwhite should help fill his shoes.

All-American, All-Conference Mike McGee proved his titles last year and dwarfed other outstanding performers Art Browning, Ed Lyon, Round Bostian, Carl Drye, and graduating Carol Jamison.

Center Wade Byrd who always gave his best effort was hampered by injury at the start of the year, but Ted Royall more than aptly stepped in to win high honors in that position. Butch Allie should give able support at center and continue his outstanding line backing job. He was shifted from fullback.

Veteran Quarterback Bob Brodhead and Co-Captain Pryor Millner, considered one of the best defensive backs in the conference, did a fine job leading the team. George Harris, injured in the first game and out most of the season, fiery Jerry McGee, and Don Altman will be top contenders for the field generalship for 1959.

Hard-charging All-Conference halfback Wray Carlton rewrote Duke's all time scoring record and just missed copping the conference rushing honors.

Unbelievable George Dutrow was the most consistent Duke all year. Endowed with a superkeen sense of balance, George was constantly falling for many extra yards. Duke will miss the Dutrow to Carlton, Carlton to Dutrow pass that was so effective last year. Duke had sterling performances, and glimpses of other future halfbacks in Bunny Bell, Danny Lee, and Dave Burch. With newcomers Jack Wilson and Dean Wright, halfbacks again loom as one of Duke's strongest positions. Fullback showed flurries of strength in the line backing of Butch Allie, punting of Andy Cottingham, and the determined all round play by Bobby Cruikshank. The loss of Cottingham by graduation and the shift of Allie to center is supplemented by new sensations Jack Bush and Bobby Crummie.

The 1958 Duke football team survived a rough schedule to finish second in the conference with an overall 5 and 5 record. The inexperienced Blue Devils began at a very slow pace. They lost a defensive game at South Carolina on bad breaks and Virginia startled them next week winning by the margin of a field goal. Duke won the next two games at home against Illinois and Baylor. They began to look good and went against a ranked Notre Dame full of enthusiasm. Beaten only by a field goal in the final half, the Blue Devils came back to the Methodist flats exhausted and whipped. The next week Duke rose to overthrow State only to be beaten by another field goal seven days later against Georgia Tech. Discouraged, the Blue Devils put up a valiant effort in Bayou land in the first quarter against the number one team in the nation, L.S.U. Superior speed and bad breaks snowed the Devils under. A fine team effort and Duke hurdled past Wake Forest. Then on a perfect day, with the "Blue and White" and the Tarheel born and dead songs echoing back and forth, Duke showed tremendous spirit and their best performance in keeping UNC from a bowl bid.

Though having the worst won-lost record in recent years, the Blue Devils remained unbeaten in the Big Ten and South West Conference. The 1958 team showed some new creations by opening up their offensive. New was the lonesome end and exciting brief appearances of Dave Sime, track star.

Columbia, S.C., Sept. 20.—South Carolina took advantage of a Duke fumble early in the first quarter to score a touchdown and held the advantage the rest of the way to defeat the Blue Devils, 8-0, before 38,000 tonight . . .

After the Blue Devils took the opening kick-off and moved from their 20 to the 40 in 4 plays, they fumbled on the 42 and South Carolina recovered. The Gamecocks scored in 11 plays with quarterback Bunch getting the touchdown and points after . . .

Duke threatened in the second quarter after Millner returned a punt to the Gamecock's 41. Carlton swept right end for 16 yards to the 25. Brodhead passed to end Lattimore for a first down on the 10. A completed pass to ineligible tackle Denne cost the Devils a 15 yard penalty, but Carlton put the Blue Devils in scoring position when he made a great catch of a Brodhead pass on the 3. Dutrow started around left end but was caught for no gain on fourth down.

Duke moved the ball to the Gamecock's 31 in the second quarter, but lost the ball there by fumble. Later Brodhead passed to Carlton on the Gamecock's 32 but a penalty for illegal receiver nullified the play . . .

The contest was a defensive battle all the way. Statistically, the teams were evenly matched. While running up 12 first downs to Duke's 11, South Carolina outrushed the Blue Devil's 241 yards to 202. Duke matched the total yardage by completing 6 of 12 passes for 62 yards while the Gamecocks gained 21 yards through the air.

Charlottesville, Va., Sept. 27.—Reece Whitley stunned favored Duke with dazzling aerials that led Virginia to a 15-12 victory before 15,000 spectators today. . . .

Duke, rugged but slow, was outfought throughout the rainy afternoon by the sharp-hitting Cavaliers and, despite heavy yardage on the ground, was out in front only for a short few minutes early in the second quarter . . . Duke was able to move on the ground but stalled at crucial times . . . The air attack by the Cavaliers wasn't a surprise. Rather it was the fact that Virginia in the last period amassed 124 yards against the big Duke line . . . After Duke took the opening kickoff and rolled downfield, Virginia rose up to hold four downs on the four-yard line, Brodhead throwing 26 yards to Lattimore being the key play. Virginia kicked out and Duke stormed back. Passes by Brodhead to Padgett and Lattimore, and a run by Carlton brought the ball to the ten-yard line, but again the Cavaliers held. Virginia opened up and kicked a field goal from the eighteen-yard line. Later Millner returned a punt 8 yards to the 42. The Dukes then moved quickly for a touchdown with the second unit doing the work. A sprint around the left end for 19 yards to the Virginia 8 by Lee set up the touchdown. Three plays later Lee dived into the left tackle, fumbled, and Spada recovered the ball for a touchdown. Carlton's kick was not good.

The Cavaliers, taking the return kick-off, marched 72 yards for a touchdown . . . Virginia scored again in the third quarter . . . Duke with its second unit in was on the move when the third quarter ended at the Virginia thirty-one-yard line.

Murray sent in his first unit and in four plays Dutrow and Carlton had moved to the nine-yard line. Carlton ripped around the right end for the touchdown. His placement was wide.

It looked for a moment as if Duke had found its power, but it lost the ball and Virginia then clamped down with control ball to eat up the clock.

Durham, Oct. 4.—Mike McGee simply put a stop to all that stuff from the Fighting Illini, and it's a good thing he and the other Duke Blue Devils did. Duke brought out a brand new offensive formation with the end wide, and it played a major role in obtaining a 15-0 lead before the game was 18 minutes old . . . Coach Murray, working secretly all week, unveiled an end who never showed up for the team huddle and lined up 15 yards outside the rest of the players. This flanker movement caught the Illinois defense by surprise and aided in the early lead . . . McGee came out of the defensive display the hero and Murray put it this way: "I think you saw one of the greatest exhibitions of football playing ever." The Blue Devils held on the 15, 7, 2, and 1 yard lines . . .

Duke used a break for their first score. Royal tackled a punt returner in his tracks and he fumbled. McGee was there to recover on the Illini 39. Carlton and Dutrow, then Dutrow and Carlton moved the ball to the 1. Brodhead kept it on a first down play, scoring over Royal and Browning. For the try Duke went for the two, and Brodhead passed expertly to Dutrow on the right side.

After an exchange of punts, Duke then marched 80 yards on 15 plays to score. This drive began with Burch's 26-yard end run, but it was Carlton who made it possible. He was trapped on a third down pass play and ran 11 yards for the first down on the Illini 28. Then Carlton ran 12 more with Browning blocking. After a holding penalty against Duke, Dutrow ran 15, and on the fourth down from the 1, Cruikshank scored over the left guard. Carlton kicked and it was 15-0. Illinois scored in the third and fourth quarters.

Durham, Oct. 11.—A determined band of Blue Devils, playing before a homecoming and "band day" crowd of 26,000 on a sunny afternoon, came from behind to win a wide open 12-7 intersectional football victory from Baylor.

Carlton hauled out the kick-off 33 yards to his own 37 and the Blue Devils moved 63 yards in 17 plays for the touchdown. Dutrow carried eight times and Carlton six times in this scoring march. The longest runs were a couple of nine yard gallops by Carlton. Brodhead threw a 7 yard pass to lonesome end Moorman on the Baylor 29. Eight plays later Carlton sliced into the end zone. The try for two failed. In the third quarter a high pass from center on a punt set up Baylor's only score . . . Later, on the Duke 39, Bell picked up two yards as the quarter ended. A Dutrow to Padgett aerial carried to the Baylor 45. Six plays later Dutrow exploded 16 yards over guard to paydirt with the help of a terrific block by Lattimore at the five . . . The score stayed 12-7 for the remainder of the game.

South Bend, Ind., Oct. 18.—Notre Dame's Fighting Irish, alternately an explosive giant and a fumbling facsimile of a great football team, today used the ancient field goal weapon to defeat Duke's Blue Devils 9-7 . . .

The field goal, which came with 8:32 minutes gone in the third quarter, erased a 7-6 Duke lead which had prevailed since the waning minutes of the first period.

Notre Dame's touchdown drive covered 58 yards in six plays, the big one a 44-yard run. They scored on a fourth down, pass play to lead 6-0. Duke's TD push covered 60 yards and took 10 plays. Principal of these were 11-yard runs by Carlton and Dutrow and a 16-yard keep play by Brodhead—a brilliant run. The touchdown came on third and five from the Irish four. Brodhead threw a four-yard scoring pass to Lee, and Carlton added by kicking what could have been the biggest point of the ball game . . .

The events between Duke's touchdown and Stickle's field-goal, and after the beautiful kick, were highly entertaining to those who appreciate penalties, fumbles, intercepted passes, and missed scoring opportunities. One of the game's many breaks backfired on the Blue Devils and yanked from their hands what would almost surely have led to a go-ahead touchdown. Just before the third quarter ended, with the Irish punting on fourth down and 16 yards from their own 20, Pietrosante got a bad pass from center and had to run. He got to his own six, but Duke was off sides. Duke's defense held the famed Pietrosante to 21 yards in 8 carries, but it was the Duke secondary stopping the Irish's halfbacks all afternoon.

Durham, N. C., Oct. 25.—Duke fought, crippled, and out manned N. C. State for three quarters then finally won 20-13 with a fourth quarter rally . . . State received the opening kick-off before a television crowd of 20,000 and controlled the ball practically the entire first period, Duke having it only six plays. State drove to the six yard line but the Duke forewall held. After swapping fumbles State moved 70 yards for the first score. On the kick-off, State tried an onside kick that went one yard. A Duke fumble stopped any advance. With five minutes left in the second period, State punted and Bell took it on Duke's 35 and raced 65 yards down the side line for the score. On the try for extra points, Brodhead pitched out to Carlton who passed to Lee in the end zone. But Duke was penalized for having an illegal receiver down field and it was called back. They failed on the next try and State led 7-6 at the half.

The third period was an exciting one, although neither team scored. Dutrow punted 42 yards which rolled dead on State's one-foot line. State's return punt carried 78 yards to the Duke 22 . . . However in the fourth period a fumbled punt that Byrd of Duke recovered set up a touchdown. Stopped once by a penalty, it was a 10 yard pass from Dutrow to Carlton in the end zone for the touchdown. Brodhead hit Padgett in the corner for two points and Duke surged ahead 14-7 . . . State came back and scored on a 53-yard pass play but Duke still led 14-13 as the try for points was no good. With the State forces tiring, Duke drove 59 yards with Carlton, Dutrow, and Cruikshank grinding out yardage slowly but surely. Carlton and Cruikshank made key gains of 14 yards each as Dutrow went 2 yards on a sneak for the score. Carlton's kick was wide and it was 20-13 late in the game . . . State gambled on last minute passes but McGee tossed the quarterback for a 12-yard loss and Carlton intercepted a pass as the game ended.

Durham, N.C., Nov. 1.—Georgia Tech succeeded on its fifth field goal try of the dark afternoon, and thereby got its winning margin in a 10-8 victory over Duke here yesterday . . . Tech scored its touchdown in the opening period after one of serveral costly Duke fumbles that gave the Engineers that ball only seven yards from the goal. They scored on the fourth down. Duke made drives to the 42 and 36 yard lines, but fumbled and were held for downs as Tech stopped both advances . . . Tech kicked a thirteen yard field goal in the fourth period to lead 10-0 . . . Less than six minutes remained to be played when the Duke march started on the 24. Cruikshank made six yards, and then Brodhead passed to Carlton for 27 to the Tech 47. Three plays later it was fourth down and three on the 39 when Dutrow took a pitchout and ran left end behind good blocking by Carlton and Brodhead. He got to the Tech 9 before being hauled down. Dutrow hit tackle for three, and then Carlton got four. "Night Train" went across. On the conversion, a pass to Cruikshank just inside the end zone was ruled good. The score was 10-8 with 2:38 left . . . Duke got another chance after a punt went into the end zone. Carlton threw a pass to Lee for thirteen yards. Sime came into the game. Two passes were wild. The third time he cut down the middle and caught a Brodhead pitch on the Tech 47 for a twenty yard gain. On the next play the trackster went to the left sideline and took a fifteen yard pass to the 32. Tech intercepted with 28 seconds left to go as a miracle comeback faded.

Baton Rouge, La., Nov. 8—The lack of a sound kicking game and a nightmare of fumbles and mistakes were the chief reasons Duke suffered a one-sided drubbing at the hands of LSU here Saturday night.

An attempted quick kick that backfired was the blow that killed Duke and sent the Bayou Bengals on a touchdown parade. It happened in the second quarter after Duke had more than held its own against the No. I team in the grid standings. The score was 6-6 at the time and the Blue Devils looked good . . . . Cottingham's quick kick from the Duke seventeen was blocked and the Tigers retrieved it on the Duke two-yard line. On the succeeding play LSU cashed in the golden opportunity for the touchdown which opened the flood gates. The Tigers quickly moved for two additional touchdowns in the first half to put the Dukes on the short end of a 28-6 count.

The Blue Devils were stymied to a great extent by offensive mistakes. Duke fumbled eight times and on five of those occasions the eager hands of the Bayou Bengals were there to gobble up the ball.

Duke accomplished one notable feat against the highly-ranked Tigers which surprised the throng of 63,000 in Tiger Starium. The Devils were the first team to score on the illustrious "Chinese Bandits." Duke drove 63 yards, mostly on the ground, with the final 4 yards coming on a pass from Dutrow to Carlton for the score which put the men of Murray in front 6-0.

Carlton's brilliant fifty-five-yard kick-off return led to the Devils' second score. Three passes to sophomore end Moorman moved Duke 35 yards for the touchdown. The Blue Dukes fiinished their scoring in the fourth quarter on a sustained march of 74 yards climaxed by Carlton's one-yard plunge. This final score also came against the far-famed "Bandits."

Winston-Salem, Nov. 16.—Power football and an aerial defense that extracted the sting from Wake Forest's dangerous passing attack lifted Duke to a 29-0 victory here today . . . In the process of nailing the victory, Carlton broke Duke's career scoring record . . . Defensively, Murray couldn't have asked for a better performance. While the Duke men intercepted three aerials, the Blue Devil linemen also distinguished themselves. They blocked a punt to set up Duke's second score and jarred the ball loose from Deacon backs on three other occasions for recoveries . . . Duke stormed into the lead rolling 71 yards in 10 plays with 17 yard runs by Lee and Brodhead providing the big movements. Carlton slammed through a giant hole in the right side of the Wake Forest line to score from 2 yards out, then accepted a lob pass from Brodhead for an 8-0 Duke margin . . . End Bartal blocked a Deacon punt at the 37. The other end Spada, grabbed the ball in the air and raced down the field to the Deacon 13. Two plays later Brodhead fired a 7 yard scoring strike to wingman Padgett, alone in end zone.

Carlton kicked the point . . . Lee was handed the chore of scoring the third touchdown, speeding over from the 5 on a cut back play, after setting up the score on a sixteen yard sweep. Carlton ran for the two points on a reverse to make the bulge 23-0 . . . For the final score, the Blue Devil reserves spanned 25 yards in six plays with sophomore Burch fleeing four yards around the right end for the score. Browning's kick for the point was wide.

Chapel Hill, Nov. 22—Duke's gallant Blue Devils proved to 44,500 spectators what a lot of folks knew all along, and exhibited tremendous football power as they made the 1958 season a successful one with a hard-fought and narrow but decisive 7-6 victory over North Carolina's Tarheels.

The victory was a come-from-behind effort. The Tarheels grabbed a first quarter touchdown, thanks to a pass interception on the Duke twenty and return to the seven from which the Tarheels scored after three tries.

But Duke's next All-American guard Mike McGee, rushed in to block Carolina's extra-point try and the play proved to be a decisive one in the victory.

The Blue Devils came back in the second half and scored on a fifty-seven yard drive, sparked by the running of Carlton and climaxed by the same great runner, who sliced into paydirt from the one. Carlton's extra-point kick with three minutes remaining in the third quarter, proved to be the difference in scoring between the two rivals.

Duke drove inside the Carolina ten twice in the fourth quarter, but a tough Tarheel line prevented any further scoring. Actually, the Blue Devils completely dominated play in the second half. After their third-quarter score, the two pass interceptions by Bartal coupled with another by Allie, plus a fumble recovery by Bartal, stifled all the Tarheels' attempts to recapture the lead.

Although their opponents outscored the Blymen by only 29 goals to 28, the Blue Devils' distribution was unfortunate. The Dukes defeated Pfeiffer by a score of 11-0 and lost a "squeaker" to North Carolina State. The Duke boosters defeated Roanoke, Davidson and Pfeiffer and dropped contests to Navy, Virginia, North Carolina State, Maryland, and UNC. The lone tie was the Washington & Lee tilt. High scorer for the year was Irv Brooks with seven goals closely followed by Gunner Schull and Don Little tied with six apiece. Outstanding performances were also turned in by left-wings Johnny Bullock and Gary Power, center halfback Allan Ross, center-forward Ghazi Qubein, left halfback Harold Damman, right halfback John Birmingham, and goalie Claude Jack.

cross country

The year 1958 will long be remembered as the year when the Iron Dukes from Duke University established themselves on the "distance running man" and posted their first undefeated cross country season since 1935. This same team had posted only a 4-5 record in 1957, but they were the class of the Atlantic Coast Conference this time and were not to be denied.

Sparked by the Galloping Ghosts who masqueraded under such titles as "The Four Horsemen" and "The Three Musketeers," the Iron Dukes displayed balance and depth as well as power and poise. The trio, composed of Captain Cary Weisiger, Dave Pitkethly, and Jerry Nourse, led the way against the opposition and were ably backed with the consistent running of Tom Bazemore, Fred Hurd, Tom Maloof, Dave Jones, Dave Honeycutt, and Malcolm Shields. Each had a share in the overall team success and was able and willing to carry his share of the load when needed. There was the group of "pushers" that kept the rest of the squad operating First Class in order to hold their spots on the team.

The schedule included the best teams in the Southern and Atlantic Conference and many meets were on the road. Getby the opener against William and Mary gave them a lift. The Iron Dukes broke the Southern Conference Champ's win streak at 18 by placing 7 runners in the top 10 finishers. When Duke beat Maryland in College Park, it was a case of the "pupil" Coach Al Buehler beating the "master" Coach Jim Kehoe. Never before was there such a team effort by a Duke squad. The easy victory over Carolina ended the Tarheels' supremacy in Cross Country in the ACC and made it easier for Duke in the State Championships. But the Conference Meet was the "Big One" and the Iron Dukes really showed their stuff. Duke trampled the rest of the ACC and won handily. All credit goes to Coach Al Buehler whose four-year building program finally paid dividends to the Atlantic Coast Conference Championship. All but Pitkethly will return next year.

As far as records are concerned, this year's 13-12 record comes close to being the worst. But as far as teams are concerned, it is of the opinion of many that this is one of the most remarkable. Losing seven of the first eight of the 1957 ACC Champion team, Coach Hal Bradley took his green team and by the fourteenth game had them rounded into a sound team. With their record being 6-8, the Terrapins of Maryland played at the Duke Indoor Stadium before a television audience. They had previously beaten Duke 64-33. This game was hard fought all the way with Duke easing out in the last minutes to win 78-69.

This victory might be considered the turning point of the season for they walloped Pittsburgh in the next game and finished the last half of the season with a 7-4 record. With this fast finish, Duke was able to muster a tie for third in the conference with a 7-7 conference record.

Individually, Youngkin scored the highest points in one game garnering 35 points against Pittsburgh. He topped the list in free throws sinking 12 for 17 against Navy and in rebounds getting 20 in the second Wake Forest game. He was elected by different polls to the first team All-ACC. Howie Hurt was selected on the second team.

Laird Blue, Don Schumacker, and Steve Smith chat after their record-breaking performances.

The Duke Devilfish completed their 1958-59 swim season with a productive 8-3 record, thus placing them second in the A.C.C. Coach Jack Persons' stalwarts lost only to Army, Navy, and North Carolina, as they defeated N.C. State, South Carolina, Citadel, Virginia, Wake Forest, Washington and Lee, Maryland and Clemson.

This season Duke sent six boys to the Eastern Intercollegiate Meet held at Yale. Those going were Captain Bruce Soule, Steve Smith, Bill Weber, Ken Whitney, Don Schumacher, and Laird Blue. Smith was undefeated in dual meet competition in the sprints. Other leading scorers for the team during the regular season were Guy Langer, Phil Wetzler, Ed Elsey, Gary Dickinson, and Howie Fisher.

Fortunately, Duke emerged with a highly talented freshman squad that is expected to bolster next year's team. Coach Persons can expect big things from the Devilfish in the future.

For Coach Carmen Falcone's matmen the 1958-1958 season was a rebuilding year brightened by several outstanding individual performances. Although their overall record was a disappointing 1-5-1, Duke's wrestlers could point with pride to Blue Devils like Karl Schettler, the sophomore who copped the ACC heavy-weight title, and Captain Ken La Bone, ACC runner-up in the 137-lb. class. A lack of experience and the mid-season loss of Wrestlers Ed Cameron, Gil Harrison, and Tom Baldwin were the Blue Devils' biggest downfalls.

In the opening match the inexperienced Dukes succumbed to an older, better balanced UVA club by a close margin of 20-12. A fast, agressive Wolfpack beat the Blue Devils in their second match of the year. Weakened by the triple-man loss after exams, the Duke matmen dropped their third straight to an unimpressive Washington & Lee squad. Finally the Dukes caught fire and smashed Wake Forest and tied The Citadel. The Blue Devils then dropped their last two maches to powerful clubs from UNC and Maryland.

Next year, Coach Falcone is expecting to see a rejuvenated, more experienced Duke improve on this year's record.

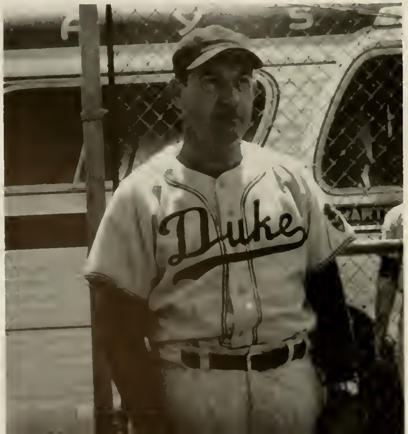
COACH CLARENCE "ACE" PARKER



Rebounding after a slow start, the Blue Devils, led by Captain Lon Bonczek, finished third in the ACC, behind Clemson and North Carolina, with a conference mark of 7-5 and 9-11 overall.

Outfielder Pete Maynard, although slumping below the .300 mark, was a member of the All-ACC team, as was shortstop Bonczek. Lon also experienced a poor year at the plate, .288, but showed flashes of brilliance. Against South Carolina, at Durham, Lon hit two home runs over the distant left field hedge.

Catcher Steve "Cheeta" Crihfield, another All-ACC performer, bore the brunt of the backstop chores. Hard-hitting Sophomore Dixon Owens was his steady reserve. Charlie Fye, Dick Smallwood follows through while Chuck Dunlevy holds State player on first.

Johnny Morris and John Klein shared the second base position. "C.C." Fye, a converted outfielder, did a creditable job of fielding and hit well. "Johnny Grit" Morris turned in some excellent fielding but wielded a light stick. Klein, a sophomore, won the Maryland game, at College Park, with a clutch home run; Charlie Dunlevy handled most of the action around the initial sack, with an assist to Bernie Buteau.

The pitching staff suffered greatly when Lefty Dick "White Rat" Smallwood experienced sore arm difficulties and saw only limited service. Dick "Pear" Burton was forced to take up the slack and was the workhorse of the staff, both as a starter and in relief. O. K. Neiss and Bert Lattimore saw considerable action. "Big Bert," against North Carolina State, at Durham, fanned all nine men he faced to preserve a 5-3 verdict for Duke. John Cappello, John "Rooster" Jenkins, Bob Byers, and Ralph McGraw rounded out the pitching staff.

Chuck Dunlevy raps out single in exciting State game.

Butch Allie, sophomore footballer, held down the third base position. Although bothered by a bad back, Butch showed some tremendous hitting power throughout the season. The other starters on the Duke team were outfielders Bill Domhoff and Bill Taylor. Both possessed great speed for their light hitting.

Coach Ace Parker did a good job and with his assistant Jim Bly composed one of the best coaching staffs at Duke. But their efforts would be useless without the able assistance of manager Bill Crowell.

The Blue Devil Stickmen, coached by Jack Persons, chalked up a rather unimpressive 2-7 record over the 1958 campaign in regular season play. A new attraction to the schedule this year was a big game on Joe College Weekend pitting the varsity against the former Duke grad players. The varsity beat the "old timers" 9-6 in a thrilling contest.

Duke's schedule was perhaps the toughest in the country, as Army, Navy, and Maryland handed the generally "young" Duke team their worst defeats. Two relatively new foes were added to the schedule, those being Rutgers and Cornell which both defeated Duke. The Devil's lone regular victory came over Colgate with a hard fought 6-4 win. Duke played its best game of the season against a highly rated Virginia team, which only beat the Devils 12-8.

Leading the squad in goals scored were juniors Rod Smith and Ross Ripple. Smith finally closed the campaign with fifteen goals to his credit. Goalie Ed Berger was the mainstay of Duke's defense, turning in numerous praiseworthy performances.

Outstanding players for Duke were Smith, Ripple, Berger, Captain Jim Matthews, Phil Wetzler, Gunner Schull, Bill Jacobus, Dan Litaker, Bob Millhauser, Howie Walderman, Doug Padgett, Jim Frey, and Gary Power.

Most of these boys will be returning for the 1959 season which appears to be an equally rugged one. Duke's good freshman squad should be a prime factor in bolstering the varsity for 1959. Coach Person's steeds will definitely improve.

Dave Sime from Fair Lawn, N. J., had received football and baseball scholarships from many colleges. He came to Duke in September 1954, on a baseball scholarship. In order to improve his speed on the basepaths, he came out for track. His first clocking was a 9.7 hundred in sweat clothes. His freshman year Dave participated mainly in baseball leading the team in batting. In addition, he ran track for the first time in his career. His fastest times were 9.6 seconds in the 100 yard dash and 21.1 seconds in the 220 yard dash. The latter time was the fastest for a collegiate freshman that year.

As sophomore Dave Sime thundered upon the scenes in the Washington Star Games in 1956, he set a new world indoor 100 yard dash record in the time of 9.5 seconds. A Melrose Games victory followed. In both meets he was selected outstanding performer. At the ACC Indoor Games he tied the world record of 6.1 for the sixth yard dash.

In his first outside meet he ran a 9.4 hundred against South Carolina. State was his next 9.4 meet. Sime broke the 30-year-old Drake Relays record running another 9.4 to beat Bobby Morrow on a water-covered track.

One of his high marks came a few days later against U.N.C. He had another 9.4 in the hundred—20.3 in the 220 and a world's record of 22.2 in the 220 low hurdles. His times this day were the best ever turned in by a single man in those three events in one day. The next week in the ACC preliminaries he breezed to a 20.1 time in the 220, another world's record. Sime wasn't through by any means. At Carolina's AAU meet he turned in his first 9.3 in the 100 to tie the world record. Since then Sime has turned trick three other times, the only person to have four approved 9.3's.

In preparing for an Olympic berth, Sime won the 100 and 220 at Stockton. A week later at Snager, Calif., he won again, setting a world mark of 20.0 flat, breaking his old mark. He also had a 9.3. It was in one of these races he strained a groin muscle that pulled in the NCAA event at Bakersfield a week later. This was the tragic incident that kept Dave from competing in the Olympics.

He ran very little until the Sugar Bowl meet in December of 1956 when he turned in a 10.2 performance in a 100 meter event, tying the old world's record. Two months later he went as a special emissary to Rangoon, Burma, sailing around the world. Sime turned back to baseball in the spring and won the ACC batting championship and made a second team All-American squad.

In the summer he went to Europe and won 24 races in 25 days and was undefeated. He returned home to be honored to be chosen in the sprints and low hurdles on AAU president Dan Farris' All Time Track Team.

Again he won the outstanding athlete award of the Sugar Bowl Meet of 1958 and came on to set a world record at Washington Star Games for 80 yard dash in 7.8 seconds. He injured his leg slightly at New York and didn't run again until out-door season.

Against South Carolina he ran a 9.4 to start the season, and later beat Bobby Morrow at Big Spring, Texas in the "Century of the Century." He won the 1958 Atlantic Coast Conference 100 and 220 yard dashes. But it was his final race for Duke University that it is believed he had gone his fastest. In the AAU at Raleigh, he was winning by four or more yards in the hundred and increasing his lead when he pulled a muscle. The winning time was a 9.5 clocking. It might be speculated that Sime would have had a 9.2 clocking, bettering the world's record. Since then Sime has has not raced, but we look forward to his next appearance for until he is on the track, who knows his capabilities?

The 1958 Blue Devil Track Team sailed through their dual meet schedule to post their 2nd undefeated season in the past three years.

Sparked by Dave Sime, the big red head from Fair Lawn, N. J., the Blue Devils made a mass assault on the university track records. The record book was rewritten with the outstanding performances listed below:

Tom Bazemore—48.5 in the 440 yd. dash; 1:54.4 in the 880 yd. run, member of record 3:17.0 mile realy team.
Jim Booher—6 ft. 4 1/2 inches in the high jump
Jerry Nourse—9:36.6 in the 2 mile
Dave Sime—212 ft. 10 inches in the javelin
Cary Weisiger—4:10.7 in the mile run; 1:54.4 in the 880 yd. run
Mile Relay (Tom Bazemore, Curt Cobb, Paul Bollman, Tom Menaker in 3:171.0)

The Thinclads opened the 1958 track season by edging the S. Carolina Gamecocks 66 1/2-64 1/2, and completed the spring vacation Florida trip by placing well in the Florida Relays.

In the "Race of the Century" Sime beat Bobby Morrow in 9.6 in the 100 yd. dash at the A.B.C. Relays in Big Spring, Texas. A week later the Virginia Cavaliers were soundly trounced 74-57 with the Blue Devils copping 10 first places while Sime garnered 16 points. Duke tallied 103 points and had a cake walk against Wake Forest and East Carolina College. Jim Booher jumped 6 feet 3 inches to tie the school record, and Cary Weisiger ran a 4:17 mile. At the starstudded Penn relays, Dave Sime edged Bill Woodhouse of Abilene Christian in the feature race of the day. Duke's spring medley relay gave a good account of itself thanks to a 1:51.6 880 yard clocking by sophomore Cary Weisiger. The Wolfpack of NC State was bowled over by the Blue Devil juggernaut $94^{1}/_{2}$-$36^{1}/_{2}$. Sime romped for 18 points and Weisiger set a new school record in the 880 yard run with 1:54.4.

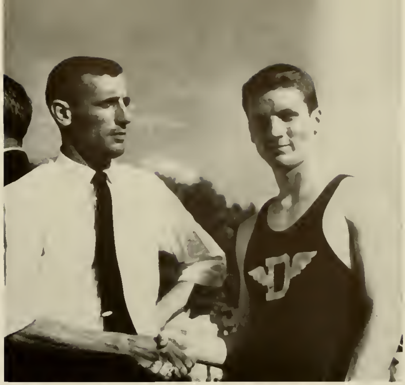
Closing out their undefeated season, the cindermen whipped their rivals from Chapel Hill—Duke 78 5/6, UNC 52 1/6. Cary Weisiger broke the 25-year old university mile record with a 4:10.7 clocking.

The ACC championship was won by Maryland $72^{1}/_{2}$ points. The Blue Devils were second with 44, followed by UNC's 37. Dave Sime received the outstanding athlete award for his 9.5 loom and 20.6. Jim Booher with a high jump of $6.4^{1}/_{2}$ set a new university record. Tom Bazemore from Kelford, N. C. came into possession of three university marks with a 48.5 in the 440, tied Weisiger's 1:54.4 in the 880 and anchored the victorious mile relay team composed of Curt Cobb, Paul Bollman, Tom Menaker with a 3.17 for a new ACC mark.

Duke's well-balanced track squad had many other outstanding achievements. Jack Linden, who placed fourth in the conference low hurdles; Larry Speer, a consistent point winner in the discus and shot put; Jon Elder who was overshadowed by an even greater sprinter, Paul Bollman and Curt Cobb who were the bulwarks in rounding out the middle distances and the mile relay. Jerry Strickland, previous school record holder with the javelin; Fred Hurd promising Sophomore in the two mile run. Bob Laverty high sailing broadjumper placed fourth in the conference. Bob Sparrow three time letter winner and consistent placer in the high hurdles. Sophomore Boyd Eaton shows promising development in the shot put. The 1959 squad will be bolstered by the undefeated freshmen track squad. Jerry Nourse, and Dave Honneycutt distance runs, Jim Vincent and T. Moorman in the shot put, Sam Yancy in the pole vault, Larry Franks and Vic Bonguard in the high jump, John McIlwain in the broadjump. Jack Wilson in the sprints.

The undefeated season was a fitting tribute to Coach Bob Chambers' 25th Anniversary as track coach at Duke University. "Doc" as most of the boys call him, is the Dean of A.C.C. track coaches. He has an outstanding record as a developer of track talent. Much credit should go to Al Buehler whose services as a coach and recruiter have enabled Duke to have this fine team.



Coach Al Buehler congratulates Cary Weisiger on his record breaking 4:10.7 mile.

Many of the records broken last year are expected to fall this year. The 1959 indoor track, a growing sport across the nation, has set a precedence of things to come.

In the North Carolina Invitational, Duke beat UNC $62^{1}/_{2}$-60, NCS running a poor third. High spot of the meet was the fine performance turned in by Tom Bazemore running the 880 in 1:51.5 behind Carolina's Dave Sturlock's 1:51.0, only .7 second off the world record. Also very good for the early season meet was Jim Booker 6.1 in the high jump, John Elder in the 60, Jack Linden in the hurdles. Weisiger and Nourse in the mile and Duke's mile and 2-mile relays.

On the new Duke golf course, which was completed in the Spring of 1958, Dumpy Haglar saw his golf team go through the 1958 season with 13 wins and one defeat. A team that lost only two men showed good balance and depth in that all the linksmen were medalists at least one meet. This year without the services of Terry Thomas and Clint Toms, Coach Hagler expects another great season from Jack Benson, Dick Sideroff, Bob Zimmerman, Hugh Patterson, Sandy Hinkle, and Tate Lanning. This fine team was the conference favorite for the ACC tournament, having lost only to Virginia by one hole. Unfortunately everyone had a cold day and Duke could only muster fifth place.

The golf at Duke shows promise of being one of the outstanding sports. Former team members, Mike Souchack and Art Wall, are now well known on the professional circuit. The new course and clubhouse are an incentive for new team prospects and future great Duke golf teams.

Up from the freshman team to contend for open spots are Jack Doser, Ted McKenzie, Jeremy Dick, Bob Lindinger, John Birmingham.

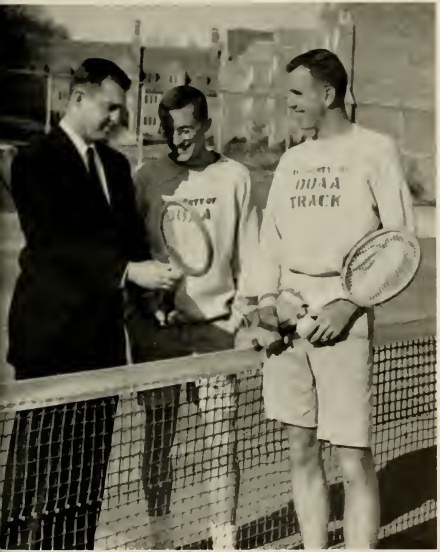
The tennis team of 1958 had a successful year compiling 6 wins against only 1 loss in the conference and copping second place in the Atlantic Coast Conference Tournament. Their overall record was not as shining, but the racket squad had tougher competition to contend with. They had a seasonal record of 10 wins against 6 losses. Duke had very little trouble in defeating other ACC teams and lost only to Carolina, the Conference Champs.

Don Romhilt won the ACC individual honors by sweeping the tourney. This was the best individual feat of the season. He teamed up with Dick Katz to finish second in the doubles division.

Senior Romhilt was the big gun all season, but he received plenty of backing from the only other senior Jack Williams. Dick Katz who played in the number two slot last year is expected to have plenty of competition from Jim Barton for top spot this year. Other able contenders are Claude Jack, Bruce Bottoms, Leon Graham, Chandler Robbins, and Fred Ruben.

Strong support is expected of Joe Gaston and Brad Reed, up from last year's freshman team.

Coach Whit Cobb gives last minute instructions to Fred Ruben and Claud Jack.



Dick Katz, consistant competitor, teamed with Romhilt to finish second in doubles play in ACC tourney.

Don Romhilt played No. 1 for Duke and won the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament in 1958.

men's intramurals

The Intramural Program at Duke enables the average student to build himself physically as well as mentally. The physical exercise keeps the body in shape and the sense of competition and sportsmanship develops the individual. It enables the student to get away from the grind of set schedule.

Quite a variety of activities are offered ranging from horseshoes to football. These are available to any student fraternity, independent or freshman, the fraternities competing for the championship trophy. Also individual trophies are handed out in each event.

This year, the Sigma Alpha Epsilon squad won the football championship.

Awarded trophies for making All-Intramural in football were backs Bill Miller and Tom Jones, Sigma Alpha Epsilon; Bill Arant, Kappa Sigma; and Sid Reese, Phi Delta Theta. Ends were Wally Hess, Sigma Alpha Epsilon and Bob Byers, Phi Kappa Sigma; guards Steve McNally, Sigma Chi, and Pat Blazer, Phi Kappa Sigma; center, Dave Gerdel, Phi Delta Theta.

The fine Kappa Alpha basketball team swept to cap the basketball trophy. Honored on the All-Intramural team were Kappa Alpha's Cris Caison and Poo Rochelle; Beta's Tom Enck and Bob Zimmerman and Zeta Beta Tau, Roy Solomon.

Earlier in the fall Jeff McAnally raced to lead his Sigma Alpha Epsilon team to victory in the annual cake race.

There are many other events in which the able Intramural managers, headed by Clarke Abbot, must organize, schedule, select officials, and check eligibility of participants. We can tell they do a good job by the increasing number of participants each year.

The Woman's Athletic Association, with the guidance and assistance of the Woman's Physical Education Department sponsors the intramural program on East Campus.

Under the direction of members of the W.A.A. board both dormitory and sorority tournaments are held. Double elimination tournaments are held for the dormitories in volleyball and basketball and single elimination tournaments in bowling and softball. Two swimming meets are held each year, one each semester.

Woman's Intramural President Pat Hansen steals the trophy for this picture.

Individual tournaments are held in badminton, table tennis, and archery. The tennis club sponsors various tennis activities throughout the year, including tournaments and sports days with nearby schools. Occasionally a campus-wide game of hockey draws cheers from the stands.

Sororities participate in single elimination tournaments in volleyball, basketball, and bowling.

The winner and runner-up of each tournament has her name engraved on one of the placques or trophies on display in the Woman's College gymnasium. At the end of the year a winner's cup is presented to the dormitory and the sorority which has earned the most points by being winners or runners-up of the tournaments. All awards are presented at the annual awards assembly each spring.

a look at the year of sports in review . . .

Over all in athletics Duke University made a good showing among its rivals. The 1958 track team was undefeated and finished second in the ACC meet. The golf team had a very fine regular season but collapsed in the tourney at Winston-Salem. The tennis team finished second in the Conference. The baseball team didn't live up to expectations, but still had a winning season. Lacrosse is still a growing sport in this part of the country. The 1958 football season can be called a success even with an overall 5-5 record. They were second in the conference, beat UNC, and showed more spirit than most previous Duke teams. The Atlantic Coast Conference Cross Country champs speak well enough for themselves, and the soccer team struggled through a tough season. The basketball team showed tremendous potential in composing a 13-12 record for the season and finishing in a tie for third in the ACC. The swimming team had their best team in years finishing second in the conference. The wrestling team lacked depth but several individuals stood out.

Scholarships are given in football, basketball, and only one in baseball. The other sports have to recruit with no financial aid to offer. Other schools in the neighborhood are more charitable and have looser requirements.

Still Duke battles on. This year baseball is expected to have an average season. Lacrosse is expected to improve with a more experienced team. Tennis should be better and golf should cop the ACC title this year. It is doubted that the track team will be undefeated this year with tough Maryland on the schedule. They should finish second in the Conference in a battle with UNC. Next fall, Duke's football team should rise to be a national contender once again, but they will have unusually tough opponents. They face South Carolina, Ohio State, Rice, Pittsburgh, Army, N. C. State, Georgia-Tech, Clemson, Wake Forest, and North Carolina in that order. Cross Country should repeat as ACC champs and have better luck in NCAA. Soccer should also improve.

Look out for the basketball team! They have a great future and this next year might be it. Swimming has to fill in a lot of lost depth but has excellent individual performers. Wrestling should improve with its outstanding individuals.

Duke University is yours, so follow its athletic program.

CLASSES EDITOR:

Terry Abraham

THE I. B. M. machine ticks away on the sheaf of cards which were fed into its imposing form for the purpose of organizing vital statistics about the incoming freshman class at Duke University.

Perhaps the administration wonders about the incoming class, known only to them by a name, small picture, and high school record. What will these students be like? What will they DO while they are at Duke? What will they make of themselves as potential leaders? These and other questions surely must come to mind each time the many applications are sifted down to those accepted to Duke. The administration knows, as do the students who have been and are at Duke, that each person in the student body is considered in an individual sense—each person COUNTS. They come for many different reasons, follow different paths of study and achievement, and all have different goals

From the whirl of freshman week activities, through the weeks of many, many freshmen assemblies, this class will move on through Duke, as a body and as individuals, just as preceding classes have done. Officers are chosen at an early date, for someone must take the reins of authority, to see that the class makes a name for itself in the annals of Duke University.

In the beginning perhaps the student will concentrate only on studies, leaving extra-curriculars to others. By the second year, the college life, dates, and extra-curriculars may take over, pushing studies back. Then meetings and group activities, along with interests on the opposite campus begin to find a more equalized place with homework and classes. Thus, the student learns the meaning of time, the value of activities, and begins to be more like the idealized "well-rounded" student.

For four years this class will be active in various fund raising projects. For four years these students will work, play, study, and grow in knowledge and maturity together. For four years students will notice the empty seats around them in the long line of assemblies, as their classmates leave Duke for various reasons. For four years the students will be gathering memories of their college life—classes, dates, homework, cabin parties, dances, extra-curriculars, term papers, big week-ends, long hours of study, and meetings, meetings, and more meetings. Then, suddenly, the four years are over, and the Administration has the answers to those questions asked so long ago. The once green freshmen are ready to graduate—the long road has ended and they leave Duke to enter the busy world beyond, accompanied by the memories experienced while at Duke—memories that differ for each individual.

Many of the Senior Class activities are concerned with traditions of the University. Accordingly, the Class planned the Flag Raising ceremony at the beginning of the school year, which dates from the Class of 1899. For the benefit of the old grads—and the undergraduates—the three senior classes worked together to present the Homecoming Dance. In addition to the dance, many seniors worked very hard by planning the week-end's activities, the barbecue for alumni, homecoming displays, and election and coronation of the queen. The Senior Class also participated in the Founder's Day observance. In the spring, the seniors in cap and gown participated tearfully in the traditional Class Night activities.

In order to raise money for a class gift, the seniors sponsored several projects. Carnation corsages were sold for the Duke-Georgia Tech game since the U. N. C. game was held in Chapel Hill. Also the seniors of the Woman's College sponsored design research surveys conducted on campus to determine preference in china and silver patterns.

This year the class especially tried to carry on activities which would be of special benefit to class members. Class banquets were held in January and March, and at the end of the year a class yearbook was distributed. In connection with the Senior Seminar a series of programs designed to help prepare seniors for and acquaint them with life outside Duke's "ivied walls" was presented. These dealt with the role of the Duke graduate in professional life, family life, community life, and in University Alumni affairs.

Katherine Walker shows Elvis how it's really done.

1958-1959 witnessed a very active Junior Class that sponsored many different activities and attempted to develop a more cohesive class spirit on the part of the juniors.

The juniors on East had their class meeting during the fall, and thereafter instituted a representative council, composed of girls from each dormitory on East. This new idea—the representative council—was immensely appreciated by the class as a group, and helped to further the class's spirit—a spirit which usually is lacking after the freshman year at Duke.

After this the juniors on East held their class banquet, which was Night Club style with imitation champagne and an excellent meal prepared by the staff of the Duke Dining Halls. This class banquet was one of the most successful affairs of its kind in the history of Duke. Of the 270 women who are in the Junior Class, 235 of them attended the banquet. All were glad they did so, and the Class hopes that the same spirit can be continued throughout the senior year. To further this Class spirit, the juniors on East held the Class Night during the spring; this event also gave the girls a chance once again to get together.

Early in the fall the juniors on West sponsored the "Devil's Revel," an annual event which turned out to be another great success. Although during the fall of 1957 the juniors on East and West jointly sponsored the "Revel," this practice was discontinued during the fall of 1958. Nevertheless, the junior girls helped to promote the event by really "talking it up" and giving it all the support they could.

As the school year of 1958-1959 was brought to a close, the Junior Class realized that very soon the brunt of the load of leadership in activities at Duke was to fall on its shoulders. With a solemn decision and dedication the Junior Class prepared for the approaching school year.

class of 1961

The main concert of the Sophomore Class at the beginning of the year was, as always, the poor and innocent freshmen. After this new Class had been on campus for a few weeks, the sophomores presented them with dinks and bows boasting "1962." In addition, the freshmen were burdened with a list of rules: the lowly freshmen were required to call the sophomores "most worthy sophomores," to be respectful, to wear the dinks or bows at all times with certain rare exceptions, and definitely not to walk on the grass. The upper classmen proved themselves not to be such ogres, however, when a couple of weeks later they sponsored Dink-Bow Day, an afternoon of music, picnic and games for the freshman girls and boys. The Dink-Bow Day again proved to be a success; the freshmen seemed to have a good time.

In addition, the Sophomore Class sponsored a dance and listening-in party for the Louisiana State University football game. Paul Dillard and his orchestra played for the event. The purpose of the dance was to build school spirit and to earn money for the Class gift to the school at graduation time.

The Sophomore Class also held a bake sale during the Fall semester. This, too, was a monetary success for the class with respect to its class gift. Then, during the two weeks of semester exams, the class sold apples in the dorms which was a successful and most popular project.

1958-1959 was truly a successful year for the Sophomore Class. The realization that they were now the up and coming leaders of the Duke campus furthered the Class and school spirit on the part of the Sophomores.

The Triple Quartet entertains at the annual BOS-Sandles Dance.

The officers of the Freshman Engineering Class are Bill McCutchen, President, and Bill Taylor, Secretary-Treasurer.

class of 1962

After recovering from the busy and hectic Orientation Week, freshmen from both East and West campuses elected their respective officers and began their class organization. Autumn found the frosh enthusiastically taking part in the games and picnic of Dink-Bow Day and later, the Freshman Dance.

Sorority rush was the first activity after Freshman Week for co-eds and ended after a week of endless parties. Trying to decide on a major, the girls heard a series of talks given in their assemblies by the professors of each department. Blazers were proudly ordered, and the girls began to feel more a part of university life. Projects for raising money for their class was an important topic of conversation throughout the year. Enthusiastically agreed upon was the Service Project in which freshman girls run errands for upperclassmen at 10¢ a job.

West Campus freshmen produced a noticeable change in the rush program by their decision on a rushing curfew. Strained relationships between freshmen and fraternity men were ended as rush started and in a week, more men were wearing pledge pins than in previous years. Also important was their desire to be permitted use of automobiles for Joe College Weekend. The men wholeheartedly took part in the Campus Chest Drive and promoted it on both campuses. Freshmen also made a request through the Chapel Administrative Committee for the chapel to be open in the evening as well as day.

Both campuses seemed to agree, however, that the main project of the freshman year is to become established on campus academically and socially. Three hour long exams, tipping dinks to upperclassmen, memorizing long lists of irregular French verbs, and first period classes were only a few of the many changes from high school life presented in the freshman year of college. The frosh pulled through, however, becoming older and wiser in the process, and even beginning to assimilate an education.

September! And cars line up in the dust behind Hanes to deposit another class and their possessions. It didn't take long to learn . . . boys entered the picture and with them came Frosh dances, mixers, and a first glimpse of Fraternity parties. Registration and long lines . . . refusing to part with a dime and therefore standing in the rain waiting for that East-West ride . . . Goon day: "Sophomores dear, thank you for our bows" . . . VIRGINIA RITCHIE
Chairman of Nurses' Executive Council

The executive Council is made up of the President, Vice-President, Corresponding Secretary, Recording Secretary, and Treasurer of the Student Government Association and the Chairman of the Honor Council, the Chairman of the Standing Committees, and President of the Freshman class. Its stated purpose is to "represent the Association and to suggest or recommend to the Association regulations which it considers necessary to carry on the business of the Association and to enforce the Constitution." Thus, as the nucleus of the organization, it works specifically to regulate all matters pertaining to the student body and not under the jurisdiction of the faculty; to increase a sense of individual responsibility in each student; and to cooperate with the faculty in creating and maintaining high ideals for nursing students. The standing Committees represented pertain to all phases of the students' life and include Judicial Board, Student Faculty, Financial Affairs, Orientation, Publications, Social, Public Relations, State Student Nurses Association, Religious Activities, Student Coordinate, Athletics, and Social Standards. The Council meets regularly twice a month and at any other time a member might so request.

nurses' judicial council

ANN DAVIS
Chairman

The Judicial Board functions as a representative body to interpret, to enforce, and to try infractions of the Student Government Association rules. It works in cooperation with the Social Standards Committee in maintaining all aspects of student conduct in regard to the school and fellow students and is responsible for affairs concerning the welfare of all students living in the nurses residence.

One of its objectives is to revise, introduce, and to clarify the reasons for all rules in an effort to meet the changing needs of the student body. Infractions of the rules in both professional and social aspects of student life are brought before the Board for trial. All matters discussed by the Board are held in confidence. Penalties are decreed only after careful deliberation and discussion to make certain that any decision that the Board makes is appropriate and just. All decisions are final. The Chairman, Vice-President of the Student Government Association, is elected by the student body and the Board is composed of class representatives.

The purpose of the Honor Council is to secure the cooperation of the student body in maintaining honorable conduct in all relations of student, professional, and social life. The Honor System works on the basis of individual participation and support. It carries its influence into all facets of student activities and makes itself felt by enhancing the individual's feeling of honor.

Each year the Freshman Class become members of this system by signing pledge cards in the presence of the entire student body. The Honor Council and advisors try all breeches of the Honor System; and the decision of the Council is accepted as final. All matters regarding a student's honor and proceedings of a case are kept in confidence. The Council is composed of a chairman elected by the student body, the President and Recording Secretary of the Student Government Association, three members elected by each class, and three Faculty members. The group tries to act in a meaningful way to any individual needing help, and to be most useful as the core around which the entire Student Government Association revolves.

Members of the Freshman Advisory Council are selected on the basis of leadership and scholarship. They work with the Orientation Chairman of the Nurse's Student Government Association to make the high school—Hanes House transition as non-traumatic and enjoyable as possible.

Functioning more effectively than any previous Hanes FAC, this years councelors were assigned "their girls" early in the summer and became acquainted with them through correspondence. They were on hand to welcome freshmen, parents, and all worldly possessions; they were present to guide and direct them through the maze of scheduled Orientation Week activities designed to acquaint them with Hanes and Duke; they conducted classes preparing them for an exam covering rules and regulations found in the School of Nursing Handbook; above all, they were, and have been all year, THERE when guidance, information and just plain thoughtfulness were most needed.

BETTY MRAZ

nurses' social standards committee

DEEDE KENWORTHY
Chairman

The Social Standards Committee is comprised of two members of each class. The chairman is a senior elected by the entire school. The chairman is also a member of the Executive Council of the Nurse's Student Government Association, and represents Social Standards on the Judicial Board.

The Committee meets monthly or whenever necessary to evaluate social problems arising within the school and to suggest ways of maintaining and elevating standards—both social and professional. It is while she is in school that the nurse must form her individual concepts of professional ethics; Social Standards Committee plays a large part in establishing a desirable pattern of behavior. The Committee is assisted by Judicial Board and Honor Council in seeing that its standards are valued and upheld.

Working with East Campus Social Standards, this committee sells the Duke Calendar and promotes interest in East Campus social activities sponsored by their social Standards Committee.

BEAUTIES EDITOR:

Elinor Hart

"BEAUTY as we feel it is something indescribable: what it is or what it means can never be said." George Santayana in "The Sense of Beauty" (1896).

Just as Santayana said, beauty is indescribable—one cannot look at a Duke beauty queen and say why she is beautiful, or why the students or judge chose her, yet there is a quality about her that is beauty. From among those girls who especially possess the qualities of beauty, a CHANTICLEER Beauty Queen and a Homecoming Queen are chosen each year. In addition, the ROTC groups also choose beauty queens; and at Christmas time and in the spring, the fraternities select their sweethearts and dream-girls. Spring also brings the crowning of the May Queen in March.

Long before most people on campus began thinking about this year's CHANTICLEER Beauty Queen, the staff of that publication was hard at work making plans and selecting a judge. They chose John Robert Powers, head of the famous modeling school, to make the final selection. In a few days, at house meetings on East and in Hanes House, five girls from each dorm were selected to represent their houses as candidates. Later pictures of the girls were displayed on large posters, and voting followed on both East and West.

From this initial voting, nine girls were selected and their pictures sent to Mr. Powers. Mr. Powers then completed the difficult task of studying the pictures and finally selecting the one he felt had more of the qualities of beauty than the others—The CHANTICLEER Beauty Queen, and sent his choice to the CHANTICLEER staff.

The Social Standards committee then took over, and made arrangements for the annual Co-Ed Ball. The Indoor Stadium was gaily decorated contemporary style and members of Social Standards were presented. When Tom Irwin, Business Manager of the CHANTICLEER, presented the court and crowned The Queen, the results of the many preparations were culminated, and the next few pages tell the story.

Duke's Homecoming Queen is chosen in a similar manner. Each dorm nominates five senior girls, from whom one is selected to represent her house on the Homecoming Court. Besides beauty, these girls are chosen for their service to the school. The Queen is selected by the voting on West, and is crowned at the Homecoming show by the captain of the football team, who this year was Pryor Millner. She reigns with her court at the homecoming game and dance the next day, the pride of both students and alumni.

Dear Mr. Singer,

Enclosed are the photographs of the candidates for the Queen of the 1959 CHANTICLEER. Mr. Powers found all the girls so very attractive that it was difficult to make a decision.

However, after very careful consideration on the basis of natural beauty and apparent poise, Mr. Powers chose the following:

1959 CHANTICLEER QUEEN-- Miss E.F.SMATHERS

and the other young ladies to be her court.

It was a pleasure to be able to help you and we send you are best and belated wishes for a very successful dance and congratulations to Miss Smathers.

Sincerely,

the chanticleer beauty queen

ELIZABETH SMATHERS

Miss Elizabeth Smathers from Lake Junaluska, North Carolina, reigns as our 1959 CHANTICLEER Beauty Queen. Libby, as she is usually known, makes her Duke home Pegram House. Libby has chosen to major in music which is one of her chief interests. She plays the French horn in the Duke Concert Band; she also gives piano lessons, being a talented performer herself. As might be expected, her plans for after graduation are to work in music—probably specializing in piano.

Libby also enjoys outdoor activities—especially tennis and swimming. Her abilities on the tennis court are difficult to match, and she has been a swimming instructor. Although busy with her many activities, Libby has managed to maintain a 3.3 academic average. Her other honors also include membership in Ivy and Sandals.

The CHANTICLEER is proud to present such a lovely and accomplished young lady as our 1959 queen.

Homecoming Queen, Sue Hancock, escorted by Pryor Millnor and Crown bearer, David Marshall.

Sue Hancock, our 1958 Homecoming Queen, is from Charleston, West Virginia, and lives in Gilbert House. Although she was at Hollins her freshman year, she has contributed much at Duke. She is a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma and was pledge-trainer this year. In addition to being a cheerleader for two years, she has been active in the Y.W.C.A. and Hoof 'n Horn. She served as Transfer Advisor in Gilbert her junior year, and became head of Transfer Advisors this year. Very interested in music and art, Sue is herself a talented artist. She has majored in history at Duke, and will probably teach in one of Charleston's elementary schools next year.

Universitas Dukiana · Eruditio et Religio

LONG rows of grey stone Gothic or red brick Georgian buildings united by wide expanses of green grass and flagstone walks have a serene aspect as one or two solitary fixtures shuffle between buildings—suddenly a distant bell rings and as if by magic hundreds of students, male and female, frowning and smiling, lingering or hurrying on, pour out of the buildings and make their way to other classes, back to dormitories, to lunch, to East Campus, or to some recreational area. This is a traditional picture of the University as students attend classes day in, day out, six days a week, fifteen weeks a semester, two semesters a year, as well as in summer school. Sometimes the sun is shining and the weather is hot, sometimes there is a nip in the air, sometimes there is a freshness about the campus as Spring approaches, or sometimes there is darkness, as clouds gather and rain falls or snow wraps the buildings in its lacy shawl.

Educational opportunities meet the student on every hand, not only in the classrooms, but through the libraries, book stores, and extra-curricular organizations. Many groups have educational origins and function to further the student's proficiency in some subject or activity. Duke offers opportunities to gain skill in athletic activities through sports and clubs, as well as having the facilities available for the sunny-day amateur who plays for enjoyment and recreation. Or there is the chance to further journalistic abilities, an eye for business, or leadership prowess in governmental or religious fields. The student finds many chances to gain a cultural background at the University, too, with programs of student orchestral and choral music, or visiting singers, ballet and dramatic companies, jazz bands, popular orchestras, noted speakers, and through the Fine Arts programs offered to the students. There are times of fun mixed with hard work—rush for fraternities and sororities, practice sessions before a student cast production such as Hoof 'n' Horn, Glee Club or Band, or the Engineer's Show. And there are times of fun with little or no work involved for many—football and basketball games, tennis matches and track meets, Dope Shop dates, and Devil's Den dancing, bridge games, big dances, dates and cabin parties, Bailey's, Spring, Joe College, and summer. These are the things that make Duke University what it is—hard work, fun, studies, Sunday worship, honors, hour tests and finals, all mixed into one—Campus Life.

"Class of 1962 Settles Down to Orientation Amid Praise" . . . thus spoke the Chronicle as it welcomed another "one out of 10 applications accepted" group through the portals of Duke University. The hectic, confusing week of orientation gets under way with the usual routine of placement tests—tours—those exciting unavoidable mixers where West frosh try to make a little headway with his half of a girl before she's snatched away by those intruders, upperclassmen—the familiar YM-YW-FAC Dance on the tennis courts—the first chapel service under the guidance of Chaplain Wilkinson—the interminable tea-party where one gets to shake President Eden's hand—registration—general assemblies—activities night—a picnic on the main East quad and a date for the flick on West. And so . . . with dink on head, bow in hair, hoola-hoop on hips, and desperately clutching the hand of his all-knowing FAC, the class of 1962 hesitantly plunges into "the best years of their lives."

Sept. 17, the flag is raised and the influx begins . . . they come from all points of the U.S. . . they are noisy—confident—brash—cocky, and seem to know the answers to all questions . . . they are frightful creatures and the bewildered freshmen are bothered . . . just who are these strange intruders . . . the upperclassmen have found their way back.

Dr. Weatherspoon, Director of Admissions, welcomes one of Duke's foreign students, Albrecht Hofmann, at the freshman class reception.

And what to their wondering eyes should appear . . . hooray—a white line, though crooked, down Myrtle Drive . . . a new golf house . . . paved roads . . . a Gothic face-lifting . . . a men's room in Giles . . . a remodeled Union lobby . . . $85,000 worth of rejuvenation upon Southgate . . . grass in front of Wannamaker . . . Anna Marie had a baby . . . an upper level honor code . . . Das Gasthaus . . . and the bitterest pill of all—the disappearance of Nature Boy, Tom Farrell and Tyson. But a few familiar faces remain . . . Washington Duke is still sitting . . . Bailey's and Tikey are ready with plenty of "spirit" . . . Big Bill with grin . . . the over-alert campus cops . . . the policies of Allen Building . . . exciting stores . . . cosmopolitan Durham . . . the uncomfortable Criterion . . . black umbrellas and rain . . . rain . . . rain.

For the next nine, tense days East is in oblivion . . . nerves are shattered . . . health is broken . . . books forgotten . . . insincerity reigns . . . hearts are broken . . . but all survive and emerge in fairly decent condition (no broken bones, only skinless knees) . . . 209 bids are extended. Pi Kappa Phi emerges victoriously grasping the blue ribbon with their "Devils Bale Baylor Bears," and the Phi Delts take second. The Devils challenge the Bears to a little contest after the annual Alumni Barbecue. Our secret weapon under the guise of Dave Sime gets the proper results, and our jubilant spirits are lifted even higher at the Homecoming Dance that evening where Sue Hancock reigns as Queen.

The Student Union brings the delightful presentation of Candide to the campus, and we discover that "this is the best of all possible worlds," after all. The Betas joyously clutch their elusive charter and sigh with relief as they are placed on Suspended Suspension. The Junior Class indulges in a little social activity at the Devil's Revel under the enthusiastic leadership of Ron Lipman. With son in hand, they attend the Glee Club concert, classes, the game against Georgia Tech, and fraternity open-houses. All is quite "college" and we discover that even Daddy can kick up his heels.

In spite of the depression, mid-semester exams, we somehow manage to keep going. The Inter-Fraternity-Sorority Sing comes as a welcome relief from our every-weekend-cabin-party-routine. The spirit felt and exhibited makes one realize Something must be done along that line, so we discover the library . . . Therefore, hibernation is a "must" and on Jan. 20, we enter the portals of study not to emerge 'til Jan. 30. The only break of day during that black period was the dedication of the East Campus Library to Steve Crihfield, its most loyal patron.

Under the excellent guidance of Rolf Towe, Joe College arrives on the Quad. Without a doubt, this is what Spring is for and for four uninhibited, glorious days we forget all intellectual pursuits—this is strictly a top drawer social period, and we prove it in every phase—beginning on Thursday, we are in a social oblivion—it's float-building time in the warehouse and spirits are flowing—crepe paper and wire-cutters are in demand—East gets late permission and the frat boys work all night—Friday—3:30 P.M.—the last bit of wire is filled and, after many long hours of toil, we see our masterpieces leave to be briefly admired by Bailey loungers and wall sitters—"Everybody" goes to the informal dance and Lionel Hampton makes the sounds—then dawns Saturday and by 10:00 A.M. all the desirable "blanket spots" are filled on the main quad—bermudas, shades, Nassau hat, Madras shirt, deck of cards and pink lemonade (a la vodka)—we're

With the vision of summer giving us the power to pursue, we somehow emerge with strength enough to make it to Myrtle before commencement.
